9100 FOR MARCH 1 DRAFT CALL HERE

Call for 9100 new draftees from Massachusetts to report March 1 was issued today in a surprise move by Maj.-Gen. James A. Woodruff, commanding general of the First Corps Area.

REBELLION'S END—President Fulgencio Batista (center) is cheered by officers and men at Havana, Cuba, after he smashed plot to seize control of the Cuban national government by a group of officials. The alleged ringleaders fled the country to the United States yesterday. (Story on Page 12)

BARKLEY, JOHNSON IN AID BILL CLASH

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5 (AP)—The Senate foreign relations committee decided today to ask the State Department whether Great Britain had made "definite commitments" to the United States on the use of the British fleet in return for American aid to the British.

Acting on a request by Sen. Vandenberg (R.) of Michigan, Chairman George (D.) of Georgia instructed committee aides to transmit to the department an inquiry on the truth or lack of truth in published reports of such commitments.

This action came as President Alan Valentine of Rochester University, testifying in opposition to the pending "lease-lend" bill, urged Congress to retain control of the American defense program while extending financial assistance to Britain.

Vandenberg put in the record of the committee an excerpt from an article written by Dorothy Thompson, newspaper columnist, which said:

"Our all-out aid to Britain is accompanied by definite commitments of Britain to us, regarding the British fleet. It presupposes a community of interests."

The order constitutes the largest number of draftees yet called from any state in the union.

In the message, sent to Gov. Saltonstall, Gen. Woodruff said the men of this call—fifth to be levied on Massachusetts—would be inducted March 1, and would be sent to serve with the 26th Division at Camp Edwards.

No other state is being called upon at this time, but the message said that when men are needed for the 43d Division they will be taken from the other five New England states and no demand will be made on Massachusetts.

This, it was explained, is in accord with the War Department's policy of assigning men to the outfits from states from which the men themselves come. The call issued today was twice as large as any previous call made on the state.

MORE CALLS LATER
Gen. Woodruff said later calls on Massachusetts would be made contingent on having adequate housing, equipment and hospitalization for the men.

Meanwhile, workmen were putting finishing touches on the new military induction center at 268 Columbus ave., South End, where 232 men in the first day's quota of the present February call will be received tomorrow.

Waiting rooms, file rooms and medical examination offices have been constructed in the building that will also be used as a general recruiting office for the regular Army.

At Camp Devens the day was featured by the colorful 101st Cavalry from New York. BRING 600 HORSES
Partly mechanized, but accompanied by 600 horses, the unit of 700 men made the trip by train. Organized first as the Brooklyn Horse Guards in 1818, the 101st Cavalry served with distinction in the Spanish-American and World Wars. The unit will train at Fort Devens for a year.

Maj. Gen. Donald C. Cubbison opened the First Division headquarters at Fort Devens with the arrival of the headquarters company from Fort Hamilton, N. Y., marking the first time in 21 years that a divisional headquarters has been established at the Ayer post.

At Camp Edwards, 90 officers and men in service with the Yankee Division observed a solemn anniversary today, as it was just 23 years ago—Feb. 5, 1918, p. m.—that the 26th Division went into action in France. The 90 men at Camp Edwards are the only ones still in service of 24,000 in the World War division.

Many of Boston's "Fighting Irish," the 101st Infantry, celebrated today because they just received their first army pay since induction.

Willkie Heads Back to U. S.

BRISTOL, England, Feb. 5 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie headed back for the United States and an appearance before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee with the parting pledge today to do "anything I can in America to help Britain in her fight for freedom."

"Your people have shown magnificent courage," the unofficial American visitor declared as he left to board a plane for Lisbon. "Keep your chin up."

Willkie slept a couple of hours on the train which brought him here from London. He arrived before dawn and was greeted by Mayor T. H. J. Underdown, who took him for a quick trip through the city's bombed sections.

"Pretty bad, pretty bad," Willkie commented as he passed wrecked buildings. Before going on, Willkie arranged to see the new hostel provided here through funds from the American city of Bristol, R. I., for British women's auxiliary services.

The building, to be known as "The Bristol, Rhode Island, War Emergency Hostel," is expected to be ready for use in a fortnight.

At Lisbon, Willkie will board a Clipper plane being held for him until tonight.

U. S. Pilot Pioneers New Route Taking Bomber to Britain

For the first time since American aid began flowing to Britain in ever-increasing quantities, a first-hand eyewitness account of how a bomber plane is ferried across the ocean to join the RAF is told in the following exclusive dispatch by J. Reagan McCrary, well-known New York newspaperman and the first civilian to make such a transatlantic journey aboard a Britain-bound bomber.

By J. REAGAN MCCRARY

International News Service Special Correspondent

LONDON, Feb. 5 (INS)—Oklahoma's Homer Berry, famous test pilot now commissioned captain in the Royal Canadian Air Force has become the first American to ferry a bomber across the new transatlantic route of record range to "somewhere in England."

CAPT. HOMER BERRY
Flies Bomber to Britain

Your correspondent was the second to make it by about 75 feet—second, because Homer was up in the nose of the twin-motored PBY bomber, and the writer was shivering back in the starboard gunner's seat, under the great glass blister which gunners call the "greenhouse."

For six hours we had been squinting into the ghost-gray fog watching for challenge lights from RAF patrol planes. We were sleepy, but we didn't sleep—because "Sparks," one of the two civilian wireless operators in the six-man crew, explained our job with these blunt warning words: "You get challenged. Then, if you don't answer in 40 seconds with the right code, the challenging plane cuts loose on you with all its guns."

So we did not sleep. We scarcely blinked.

Neither did "Sparks," who sat in

11 BURN TO DEATH IN DEFENSE PLANT

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Feb. 5 (INS)—Eleven men trapped in a third-floor workshop by a raging blaze in the plant of the New Haven Quilt & Pad Co., working 24 hours a day on defense orders, burned to death today.

One of the dead was Sallie Rosenbaum, 30, a Jewish refugee, who had hoped to earn enough on his new job to bring his wife and infant from Germany to this country.

The other identified dead were William Della Selva, 39; Philip Becker, 40; Flore Moniello, 19; Paul Fiorentino, 36; Dominick Calvano, 20; Eliza Miller, 19; David Chornowiz, 48, and Nathan Swinkling, 23.

The tenth and eleventh men were not immediately identified. The plant was working on $2,000,000 in defense orders for mattresses and quilts. The highly inflammable bedding materials spread the blaze in whirlwind fashion.

It was believed about 25 or 30 men were in the room where the fire started. It was confined to that section of the plant and the other departments will continue work, it was announced.

Seventy-seven persons were at work on the night shift in the plant when the fire broke out, police said. Thirteen men who jumped from the third floor and were slightly injured were Anthony Celotto, 24; Eugene Chairelli, 19, and Walker Makowski, 20.

It was believed a spark from a machine which fluffs cotton may have set off the blaze.

The high loss of life was attributed to efforts of the employees to smother the blaze on their own before summoning the New Haven fire department. Several employees were reported to have run back into the building to retrieve their personal possessions and then become trapped by the flames.

Loose cotton on the premises and other materials used in the mattresses and comforts spread the flames rapidly, according to Fire Chief Paul Hines.

When the fire department arrived, the building was one big mass of flames with all exits cut off.

ROMANCE END

AT POLICE HEADQUARTERS—Edith Anderson, 17-year-old East Boston schoolgirl, arrives at police headquarters today in custody of Special Officer Patrick Mulvey . . . end of her "honeymoon" trip to Mississippi with Everett Councilor Alfred P. Farese.

Eloper's Tearful Wife Forgives Him in Cell

Less than a week after their elopement to the Southland, City Councilor Alfred P. Farese of Everett and 17-year-old Edith Anderson of East Boston were returned here today—both flatly denying they had married.

A few hours after the return, in the custody of Farese's younger brother, Dist.-Atty. John Farese of Ashland, Miss., the councilor's young and pretty wife greeted him in an East Boston police station cell, expressed her forgiveness—and then burst into tears.

This was just before Farese and Miss Anderson went into East Boston court for arraignment, the councilor on a charge of abduction and Edith on a charge of being a runaway.

Earlier the couple had appeared in a police headquarters lineup, where Farese refused to answer questions regarding a marriage, but where the girl declared they had not been married.

MEETS WIFE
Mrs. Josephine Farese, mother of a daughter three years old this month, and again expecting motherhood, waited for an hour at East Boston police station before the meeting with her prisoner husband.

Also, it was learned, Edith had been questioned today by G-Men at East Boston station in the presence of Police Capt. Thomas Mulvey, but with that outcome, if any, no one would disclose.

Dressed entirely in black except for a white collar and appearing ill, the young wife finally was admitted to the children at the rear, which she entered on the arm of her brother, Angelo Cioffi.

Farese was lying on the cell bunk, on his back, puffing thoughtfully on a cigarette.

"Farese!" the accompanying police officer called, but the Everett councilor made no answer and paid no attention.

But when Mrs. Farese, in a timid

POWDER PUFFS TO GO WITH '41 ICE CREAM

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 5 (AP)—Pretzels and powder puffs with your ice cream are 1941's newest concoctions of the soda fountain.

Take it from the ice cream manufacturers, the outstanding combination of the year will be a raspberry soda, served with two pretzels on the side and one hanging on the straw.

The idea is that people like to nibble something salty and crisp with their ice cream.

This pretzel and ice cream delicacy was one of several new creations demonstrated today by the International Ass'n of Ice Cream Manufacturers.

Other specialties included sundaes individualized for each member of the family. Mother and sister, for example, can order a "powder puff," consisting of vanilla ice cream covered with marshmallow and supplemented with a powder puff on a side plate.

George W. Hennerich, managing director of the Association's Ice Cream Merchandising Institute, Inc., explained this unique dish originated from the common sight of "women fiddling around in their purses in a futile hunt for a powder puff."

"We just decided we'd save them the trouble and give them one," Hennerich said.

Cop Tells of Finding Mrs. Farrell's Body

SALEM, Feb. 5—James H. Pike of the Salisbury police, one of the last persons to see Mrs. Olive Farrell, Salisbury Beach hotel hostess, alive and who discovered her body two or three hours later floating in the surf, told of his discovery in Essex Superior Court today.

Pike was the first witness called today at the trial of John W. Henry, 200-pound special policeman, who is being tried before Judge Vincent Brogan and a jury on a second degree murder charge.

Following the discovery of a pair of corsets and women's underwear in the driveway of the Rolling Surf Hotel, Pike testified:

"I flushed my light along the water edge and walked northerly about 100 feet. Fifteen or 20 feet out in the water I saw a body floating face upward.

"I took off my shoes and stockings and waded in and brought the body ashore. I called to Patrolman Sargent to come and help me drag it up on the beach. I brought it up to the high water mark.

IDENTIFIES PHOTOS
Pike identified pictures of the victim as Mrs. Farrell, Michael Batul, counsel for Henry, also examined the exhibits but Henry sat stolid and did not even glance at the photographs.

When called to the stand, Pike testified he went to Shaffer's barbecue restaurant around 1:05 on Oct. 25, Henry sat in the booth beside him, and Mrs. Farrell was sitting on the floor.

Henry said, Pike told the court: "Don't touch her, she'll get up."

The witness said both Henry and Mrs. Farrell "had been drinking," but would not describe their condition as "drunk."

Prosecutor Hugh A. Cregg asked Pike:

"Are you afraid of Henry?"
Pike, a man of slight build, answered:

"No, I'm afraid of nobody."
"Were you afraid of him that night?"

"I saw no reason to be."
Pike testified he saw Henry and Mrs. Farrell on Central avenue later and that "were walking straight." He returned to the police station.

He left the station later with Patrolman Jacob Sargent, he said, and drove the police car down Central ave.

SAW COUPLE ON BEACH
"Were you looking for them?"

"No."
They were standing under an arc light, talking, Pike said. He next saw them sitting on the sand at the beach, about 2:15 a. m. He and Sargent observed nothing particular in their actions, he said, and when the cruising car made its last trip around 4 a. m. neither Henry nor Mrs. Farrell were to be seen.

Pike then testified he observed clothing in the driveway of the Rolling Surf Hotel, got out of the car and searched the locality.

"I found nothing in the sand but saw drag marks and followed them down to the ocean front." It was then, he told the court, he discovered the woman's body in the surf.

2 Indicted in Woman's Death

TAUNTON, Feb. 5—An indictment charging them with the murder of Mrs. Bertha Harwood, 55, was returned by a Bristol County grand jury here today against Frank M. Hart and Ernest Ward, both of New Bedford.

The indictment was returned to Judge J. Arthur Baker in Superior court.

In lower court hearing it was testified Mrs. Harwood, estranged from her husband, left a New Bedford dine and dance place with Hart and Ward last Nov. 29 and was driven by them to a lonely "lovers lane."

There, it was alleged, the men attempted to attack Mrs. Harwood. She resisted and in the struggle was killed. Her body was left in the parked machine and later found by police.

Hart, 32 years old, is divorced, and Ward, 34, is separated from his wife.

Because Lois Andrew Jessel has "flown the coop" (this is the lawyer's term) and is not available, charges brought against the DeAnora Cafe, Inc., of Warrenton, were dropped today in municipal court.

As a result, Lois' public entertaining was halted and the state department of labor brought against the operating company three charges—employing a minor after 10 p. m., employing a minor under the age of 16 where liquor is served (they were taking no chances), and employing a minor over 16 and under 21 without possessing the proper certificate.

When a representative of the Department of Labor and Atty. Herbert F. Callahan, representing the defendant company, appeared before Judge Frank W. Tomasello, Callahan requested that the charges be dismissed. They were.

SHOTS HALT 3 BOSTON GEM THEFT SUSPECTS

GREENFIELD, Feb. 5 (AP)—Three Boston youths were halted by police bullets today after they allegedly stole jewels valued at $1086 from a store and then drove 12 miles in an unsuccessful attempt to escape.

They gave their names as: James Leone, 20, Boston; Louis M. Blotcher, 22, and John S. Hart, 21, both of Roxbury. All denied any connection with a break in the Simmons Jewelry Store, where diamonds and watches were scooped out of a display counter.

The sound of breaking glass attracted Patrolman Eugene Crawford to the store and he telephoned other officers. The chase over icy roads was at a 75-mile clip. The youth's car, allegedly stolen in Boston, Jan. 17, failed to negotiate a curve and they leaped out into nearby fields where police overtook them. The loot was recovered, police said.

6 RABBI'S WIFE, SON SUICIDES

EVENING AMERICAN, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1941

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5 (INS)—The wife and son of Rabbi Louis Wolsey, one of the most prominent leaders of American Jewry, were found dead today in a suicide pact in the garage of their home in suburban Elkins Park, according to police.

The couple, Mrs. Florence Wolsey, 48, and the son Jonathon, 24, seated themselves in one of the two Wolsey automobiles and started the engine using a hose to pipe the deadly carbon monoxide gas fumes into the automobile.

Rabbi Wolsey himself discovered the tragedy soon after his return from New York city when he became uneasy over the absence of his wife and son and with a friend, Dr. G. C. Tassman of Germantown, went to look in the garage to see if one of the automobiles was in use.

Two notes were left, both addressed to Rabbi Wolsey. Their contents were not immediately made public.

It was learned from friends that Mrs. Wolsey and the son, known to his friends as John, had been in ill health recently and had grown despondent over persecution of their race abroad.

Mrs. Wolsey was the former Florence Helen Wiener, of Cleveland, 6. Rabbi Wolsey came here from Cleveland in 1925 to head Rodef Shalom Temple, one of the city's wealthiest and most influential congregations.

The family had a large home in Elkins Park, an exclusive residential suburb.

Mrs. Wolsey had telephone Dr. Tassman earlier in the evening, saying she and Jonathon were going to dinner and the theater and asking him to meet Rabbi Wolsey upon his return from New York at 11 p. m.

Dr. Tassman did so as they went to the Wolsey home. They sat and talked and when the hour passed midnight, Rabbi Wolsey went to the garage.

100 FLEE BRIGHTON APARTMENT FIRE

Faint and coughing from the effects of heavy smoke, more than 100 persons in 47 families occupying the Reservoir Manor apartment house on Commonwealth ave., Brighton, fled to the street when a two-alarm fire broke out in the building early today.

Street Work Soon to Begin

A wide boulevard for traffic, stretching along Boylston st. to Copley sq., then on Huntington ave. to the Opera House, received its initial impetus today with the Washington approval of a $47,434 WPA project to close up the old Boylston st. subway entrance.

The trolley subway entrances at Boylston and Arlington sts. will be covered, filled and levelled as the first step in the work. The new Huntington ave. subway opens Feb. 16.

Safety islands in the middle of the street will be installed and the street resurfaced. Then the car tracks on Boylston st. and Huntington ave. will be removed and that section resurfaced.

Hydrant Crash Ends In Ice Avalanche

Repair crews today patched up High st., Medford, where a geyser, an avalanche and floating icebergs were produced after the auto of William M. Cox, 69, of West Medford hit a hydrant.

A geyser 20 feet high shot up. Banks of snow and ice lined both sides of the street. The water loosened them and they floated down the hill. At Winthrop sq., the water flowed over the Hastings estate, which is below street level, leaving the snow and ice in the highway. This caused a re-routing of traffic through Winthrop and Woburn sts. until city crews arrived to shut off the water and clean the square.

Drowning Death Seen Accidental

An accidental death theory was advanced today after the body of Paul Gartland, 33, of Crest ave., Chelsea, was recovered from the Mystic river near Chelsea bridge. Police said he had been subject to sick spells and expressed the opinion he was stricken while sitting on the bridge rail. He had been missing since Jan. 21.

CAMP ROBINSON, Ark., Feb. 3 (AP)—The government provided the hot water, soap and electrical energy, so the men of Company A, 110th Quartermaster Regiment, furnished the thrifty idea and the finances. They bought a washing machine, assessed each man 10 cents a week to meet payments, quit sending laundry to Little Rock.

Everett Man, 72 Ends Own Life

First removing the gas stove burners, a 72-year-old retired Everett sign painter committed suicide today by covering his head with a blanket and inhaling illuminating gas.

Edward F. Knight of Chestnut st., was found dead in the kitchen of his third floor apartment by Mrs. Hannah Bradley, owner of the building, when she arrived to get his breakfast.

Mrs. Bradley told police she found the door cracks stuffed with paper and Knight sitting in a chair with his covered head resting on the edge of the stove.

Dr. A. D. Guthrie, Middlesex County associate medical examiner, pronounced the man a suicide.

No-Fix Parking Drive Cuts Boston Traffic

Automobile traffic in Boston was cut an estimated 50 per cent today by the new "no fix" parking drive, according to traffic police.

Officials said the drive had so frightened "all-day parkers" that it was possible to see the decrease in the number of cars on the streets.

On the 10th floor of the traffic bureau all officers except Capt. James T. Sheehan—rarely in his office—were rookies with no "friends." Other officers of the traffic bureau were "not available" on the telephone.

The traffic bureau was jammed with motorists reporting tags, and a rushing business was done at the courthouses.

A squad of 35 officers, many of them rookies from outlying divisions, ruthlessly patrolled the downtown area and "decorated" 2000 autos with blue tags.

So zealous were the taggers that even the cars of Gov. Saltonstall, Lieut.-Gov. Cahill and Atty.-Gen. Bushnell would have borne tags except for the intervention of State House guards, who told the officers that the autos were on state-registered space.

Another tag was placed on the car of Deputy Supt. John M. Anderson opposite police headquarters. Capt. James T. Sheehan, trouble shooter for the department, headed the drive and ordered the squad to spare no one and court attaches, politicians, State House employees and even policemen received summonses.

Offenders received tags directing them to appear "immediately at the traffic bureau's Milk st. office, where they were handed summonses. By thus summoning the drivers, rather than sending slips through the mail, police believe they save time and money in obtaining court fines.

Last of No. 10 Club Honors Departed Pals

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 5 (AP)—Frankfort's No. 10 Club is dissolved. Jack K. Thatcher, last survivor, dined alone at the Indianapolis Athletic Club last night and carried out a pledge given when the club was formed in November, 1886, after a hunting party.

Facing a circle of nine empty chairs, the 19-year-old retired printing executive drank a toast from a cloudy and lifeless bottle of champagne saved from the club's first dinner.

He choked as he drank. Friends and relatives sitting at another table saw tears running down his cheeks.

"This is a sad occasion to me," he said. "The good fellows who have gone away and left the burden on me. All I can say is, here's to the boys who have gone ahead to blaze a trail for me."

Thomas C. Paris, Frankfort bachelor and next-to-last member of the club, died last month.

Thatcher now lives with a sister-in-law here.

Lupien Charges 'Fact Distortion'

State Civil Service Director Ulysses J. Lupien today charged Miss Marian Nichols, socialite leader of Civil Service reform, "distorted the facts" when she accused him of reviving an old list of fire chief eligibles for an hour.

He explained that he made the appointment of district chiefs the day Fire Commissioner Reilly requisitioned them and that on the following day he established the new list of eligibles.

FUND IS $258,000 SHORT AS DEADLINE DRAWS NEAR

As the hands of the clock moved toward the end of the Campaign at 6:30 tonight, the Greater Boston Community Fund still had an estimated $258,000 to go and a few short hours to raise it in, Henry R. Guild, general chairman, declared today.

Total pledges amounted to $4,625,000 shortly after Campaign headquarters opened, Guild estimated. The Campaign goal is $4,883,000, the minimum necessary to support 200 hospitals, health and social service agencies this year.

The deadline for the drive, waged since January 18 through 46 cities and towns of Greater Boston by 25,000 volunteer solicitors, is the opening of the final dinner tonight at 6:30 in the Hotel Statler.

"By tonight I trust that we will have demonstrated that voluntary democratic methods of working for the common good are efficient and do not just stop short of their goal," Guild said today.

"We're going to prove that the American way works—that the American way wins."

Guild urged that every citizen, who has not yet been approached by a solicitor, call Community Fund headquarters, HUBbard 8600, or send by messenger or special delivery mail a pledge on the card printed in this newspaper today.

"Everybody must do everything he or she can to boost the Community Fund," Guld declared. "And it must be done now—to-day."

In consideration of the services rendered the community by participating sponsors and of the gifts of others, I subscribe for 1961 to the FINAL DAY—Swinging into its final day, the Community Fund Campaign is $258,000 shy of its goal . . . You can help . . . if you haven't already . . . by filling out above pledge card.

the Community Fund total is an unusual one from Everett.

Mrs. Abigail Marsden lived with her daughter at 5 Kenwood rd., Everett, until last year, when she died at the age of 102.

Last year Mrs. Marsden gave 161 pennies to the Community Fund Campaign—one for each year of her age. One of the neighbors' children, Gwendolyn Sweetser, whose years measured in pennies would have amounted to very little, was so impressed that she gave Mrs. Marsden for her last birthday 162 coppers saved up from her allowance.

At that time, Mrs. Marsden said: "We'll keep that for the Community Fund Campaign next year —because I know I won't be here with you then."

Today the $1.02 was turned in by Miss Julia Case, volunteer solicitor.

U. S. Takes Criminal Action on ASCAP

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 5 (AP)—The federal government today formally charged the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, 19 corporations and 26 individuals with violation of the Sherman anti-trust act.

The charges were contained in a bill of criminal information filed in the United States district court. Federal Judge F. Ryan Duffy set the defendants' arraignment for March 5.

Victor O. Waters, special assistant to the attorney-general, said the information contained numerous specific charges, including:

Conspiracy to pool and control illegally most of the desirable copyrighted music available for commercial use and public enjoyment, for the purpose of eliminating competition and monopolizing the supply.

Illegal discrimination against users of copyrighted music and authors and composers who are not members of ASCAP.

The government has obtained a consent decree in its civil suit against Broadcast Music, Inc., ASCAP's rival in a controversy that has deprived most radio stations of thousands of tunes since Dec. 31.

Under that decree, entered in Federal Court here Monday, BMI agreed to permit broadcasters to buy music either by the piece or by the program on a "pay-when-you-play" basis. BMI was created by the radio industry, National Broadcasting Co. and Columbia Broadcasting System.

BMI also agreed not to engage in certain other practices which the department alleged were in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, including the policy of "all-or-none" in licensing its music.

However, the consent decree becomes effective only when similar restraints are imposed on ASCAP.

Fruit Exportation Banned by Vichy

VICHY, France, Feb. 5 (AP)—Exportation of fruit, fresh vegetables and bread except to parts of the French Empire was prohibited today by a Vichy government decree.

The decree established strict control of such exports even to France's colonies.

ANOTHER WITNESS DENIES BUCKLEY OFFERED HIM JOB

Another denial of any offer of a job from State Auditor Thomas J. Buckley for pre-election services came in the testimony of a surprise witness called today in the three-day hearing of an election petition seeking Buckley's ouster on an allegation of election frauds.

Bernard M. Cronin of Ruggles st., Roxbury, an engraver employed by the U. S. War Department told Justices Thomas H. Dowd, Joseph Walsh and Jesse W. Morton about "dropping in" at the photo-engraving shop of Philip A. Burns on Hanover st.

Burns asked him to testify in court, he said "about Buckley, to the effect he (Buckley) had promised to give him a job."

"What conversation took place," asked Hubert Thompson, counsel for Buckley.

"FEW BUCKS IN IT"

"Mr. Burns asked me would I testify that Buckley offered me a job, saying there would be a few bucks in it for me."

"What was your answer?" "I didn't say no and I didn't say yes. As a matter of fact I hedged around a little and then I went out."

"Were you offered a job by Mr. Buckley?"

"No. I never was offered any job by Mr. Buckley. All I did for him was to help his campaign in the Ward 4 district in connection with my brother's candidacy for State representative."

The witness added that Burns told him he had been promised a job by both Buckley and Welch (John F. Welch, now confidential secretary to the State Auditor).

"My answer to that was I don't remember ever being promised any job, whereupon Burns replied, 'Oh, yes, you were going to be taken care of.' And I replied, 'That's all new to me.'"

Five other witnesses were called before the petitioners ended their case.

Philip Brady of Alpine st., Roxbury, a free lance writer, said he was responsible for a news story in a "throwaway" newspaper that court action would be taken against Buckley. He said he knew of no contracts.

PROMISED A JOB

George M. Kelly, a political leader in the South End, and WPA worker, said Buckley, with Burns and a companion, called at his home early in June and asked for support on the promise of a job.

Kelly admitted he was not an auditor but said he "could add, subtract and multiply."

Mrs. Mary McQuade, of Norway st., wife of one of the petitioners, said Buckley told her after election "they would be sitting pretty" and her husband "would be taken care of."

Robert V. Hennessey of Gates st., South Boston, a WPA worker, said he worked for Buckley in the election and had been told by Burns that he would get a job.

Everett Schoolboy Struck by Auto

John Carey, seven, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Carey of Cleveland st., Everett, was struck and seriously injured by an automobile as he skipped across Broadway, Everett, on his way to school just before 9 a. m. today.

The boy was taken to the Whidden Memorial Hospital, where doctors said he had a fractured skull.

The State Department said Sept. 3, 1940, that it had received a pledge that in no event would the British fleet be sunk or surrendered to Germany. If driven out of European waters, it was said, the English war ships would be sent abroad for the "defense of other parts of the Empire."—Editor's Note.

Valentine said proponents of the legislation had used "fear" to convince the people that aid to Britain was necessary and that "any intelligent person knows that the aid they recommend will lead to war."

BARKLEY IN CLASH

"Do you think," heated interjected Sen. Barkley (D.) of Kentucky, "that the President of the United States and members of Congress who advocate this bill, including myself who introduced it, if they are intelligent persons, know that this will lead to war?" "I believe that, yes," the witness replied. "That is my opinion and I'll stand on it."

"If you think that your testimony is of no value," Barkley shouted.

"I think that it is an utterly improper remark," Sen. Johnson (R.) of California, told Barkley. Both senators began talking at once and chairman George (D.) of Georgia, rapped for order. "I don't care to have the senator from California pass on what I say," Barkley said warmly. "When a witness comes here and testifies I'm going to comment on what he says."

JOHNSON MAKES RETORT

"And I'm going to comment on the senator's statement," Johnson retorted.

Valentine testified before the committee shortly before the House opened its third day of debate on the measure in an atmosphere charged with the tension created by a clash of opinion between President Roosevelt and Sen. Wheeler (D.) of Montana, a leading opponent of the bill.

Wheeler had asserted that as a result of the Administration's British aid program the United States Army did not have a single modern combat plane.

The President replied that use of official and unofficial figures to prove many things must give comfort to the head of the German government and Wheeler came back with an offer to match his patriotism with that of any of the President's advisers.

OBJECTS TO BILL

Valentine told the Senate committee that he objected to the bill because it "delegates to one man full power to control completely the industrial life of America down to the smallest factory."

The witness, who got part of his education as a Rhodes scholar in England, said the legislation defined defense materials so broadly "that they include everything that floats or flies or could be used to injure an enemy or anything that could contribute to the manufacture of any of these."

"This amounts to abnegation of Congress, the nullification of property rights, the centering of complete economic power in one man. Is the emergency so great that the President needs all this power?"

James S. Kemper, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, also opposed the bill.

Kemper said the national policy council of the United States Chamber had concluded unanimously, after studying the bill, that enactment of the legislation "would not contribute to the defense of the United States."

Police Book Councillor, Girl In Elopement voice, said "Dear," the councillor was on his feet in one bound. I'M INNOCENT, FARESE CRIES

"Hello," she said.

"Hello," Farese replied.

Then there was a long and painful pause while husband and wife gazed at each other. Finally she broke it by saying:

"I'm glad you're back."

Farese almost shouted:

"I'm innocent. No matter what anyone says, I'm innocent. I didn't have anything to do with that girl."

Mrs. Farese's brother started to say something, but Farese broke in with:

"It's all right! It's all right!"

The young wife, her lips trembling, put one hand through the cell bars, but Farese made no attempt to take it as she said:

"I forgive you. Don't think about it. It's all perfectly all right."

BURSTS INTO TEARS

She smiled as she said it, despite his ignoring of the hand. There was another silence while she withdrew it. Then she suddenly burst into tears.

Without more words, her brother led her away and back to the police station anteroom, where she broke down completely.

With Farese's brother, John, driving his own car, and Mrs. John Farese accompanying the party, the councillor and Edith reached the girl's mother's home in Havre at about 7 a. m.

Dist. Atty. Farese of Benton County, Miss., and his wife had been made special deputy sheriffs to return the couple here from the South.

CAR SEIZED BY SHERIFF

Meanwhile, the automobile in which Councillor Farese and Edith had driven away on their "elopement," a machine registered to his wife, had been seized by the Benton County sheriff.

Following a short conference with Mrs. Anderson at the Havre st. house, Dist. Atty. Farese drove his prisoners to the police station, where they were questioned first by Special Officers Patrick Mulvey and Philip Whaland, who were originally assigned to the case. The Anderson girl assumed a different attitude than had been expected, according to police, and appeared to be not the least bit worried. Instead, while she was being booked as a runaway, she amused herself by reading the morning paper comic strips.

DENIES MARRIAGE

The questioning which followed brought from her the statement that she and Farese had not been married, although a telegram and letters received by the mother said she had.

"I don't have to talk," Edith finally told the officers. "I know my rights."

From the station the couple were taken to police headquarters and placed on the showup platform. Farese first, then Edith. Here she repeated her statement that there had been no marriage, and at times she wept under the questioning.

Then Farese was photographed and fingerprinted and the couple were returned to East Boston for arraignment.

In court, before Judge Charles J. Brown, the Everett color pleaded innocent to the abduction charge and was held in $2000 bail for a hearing Feb. 18, the ball not being raised immediately.

Edith pleaded not guilty to the runaway child charge, and also to an added charge, that of being a stubborn child.

Her case also was continued to Feb. 18 and she was released in $100 personal recognizance, in custody of the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Later Farese may have a date with federal officials, Boston police having contacted the Department of Justice. This office has been following the case and it is expected that the councillor may be questioned by G-Men.

F. D. Aide in China to See Chiang Kai-Shek

HONGKONG, Feb. 5 (AP)—Laughlin Currie, administrative assistant to President Roosevelt, arrived here on a clipper plane today and prepared to fly tomorrow to Chungking, seat of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's government.

Chinese newspapers warmly welcomed Currie, whose mission at Chungking, they believed, would determine the extent of future American aid in China. The papers appealed for extensive aid on grounds it would enable China to launch a general counter-offensive against the Japanese which would forestall Japanese expansion southward and help avert a war in the Pacific.

may reputation being ruined like this?"

"Then as he was being taken out for fingerprinting and photographing, reporters asked him if he and Edith had married."

"Positively not. I'm not worrying about this," he replied quickly.

Edith Anderson was placed in front of the microphone and Lieut. Crowley began questioning her. She was chewing gum.

Q—How old are you? A—18 on May 20th.

Q—Where do you live? A—East Boston.

Q—Have you got any boy friends in East Boston? A—No. Q—During the past week you haven't been in East Boston? A—No.

Q—Were you in New York State? A—Yes, we passed by.

Q—Who do you mean by we? A—Me and Al.

Q—How long have you known Al? A—Four months.

Q—You've been keeping company with him for four months? (No answer.)

Q—Did he tell you he was single? (No answer.)

Q—Did he tell you he was married? A—I'm not saying.

Q—Did you tell anyone you were married? A (after some hesitation)—I'm not saying.

"DIDN'T GET MARRIED"

Q—Did you go to New York, New Jersey and Mississippi? A—Yes.

Q—Were you married in Union City? A—We didn't get married.

Q—Did you stay in a hotel there? A—I'm not saying.

Q—Did you register as Mr. and Mrs. in the Campbell Hotel in Elizabeth? A—I'm not saying.

Q—Who signed the register? (No answer.)

Q—What hotel did you stop at in Elizabeth? A—I don't remember.

(Here Edith began to weep softly, and meanwhile Fariesse was leaning against the wall at one side, his hands in his pockets and a faint smile playing around his lips.)

WROTE TO MOTHER

Q—Why did you go to New York—can't you tell us that?

A—Yes, I can, but I don't want to say anything.

Q—Did you send a telegram to your mother, saying you were married? A—Yes. (She hesitated here.) I didn't know anything about him. We were writing. We weren't married.

Q—Did he say in East Boston he was single? (No answer.)

Q—Would you have gone to Mississippi with him if you knew he was married? (No answer.)

Q—Why did you tell your mother you were married? A—I didn't want her to worry.

Q—You knew it was wrong? A—I didn't think it was wrong.

Q—You wrote on hotel stationery to your mother? A—I wrote to my mother.

Q—Hotel records show that you registered there at 6:30 p. m. and left at 6 a. m.; that you stayed in the same room. (No answer.)

"SUITED TO EACH OTHER"

Lieut. Crowley turned and made the same comment to Fariesse, who replied promptly:

"I refuse to answer. I stand on my constitutional rights."

Then Crowley turned back to the girl.

Q—Do you think Alfred is still in love with you? A—(With a little giggle, the tears apparently forgotten) I know he is.

Q—Don't you think he's in love with his little baby in Everett? A (after a pause)—I don't know.

Q—Did you write a letter to your mother in which you said, "Al respects you as much as he respects his own mother?" A—Yes.

Q—Did you write that "Al takes good care of me?" A (smiling broadly now)—Yes.

Q—Did you write, "We are both suited to each other and crazy about each other?" A—Yes.

Q—Did you write that your honeymoon so far had been perfect—it was wonderful? A—Yes. At this point Fariesse interrupted with:

"Thanks for the d.g. Sarge."

This reduced Lieut. Crowley by one rank, but before he could reply Fariesse went on with:

"I think the prisoner (Edith) should be told of her constitutional rights."

The officer shot back at Fariesse:

"Well, she has a moral right to answer."

Fariesse's eyes seemed to narrow as he straightened up from his crouching position against the wall and said to Crowley:

"Well, she hasn't been warned that anything she says can be used against her."

The police officer carried the argument no further:

"Take him out of here," he ordered.

When Fariesse had been escorted from the room, Crowley turned again to Edith for one last question.

"Is there anything you want to say to us," he asked, "that you didn't want to say in front of him?"

"No," she replied coldly.

Nazi Airplane Crashes in Eire

DUBLIN, Feb. 5 (AP)—Ireland's government announced today that this morning a German aircraft crashed in the vicinity of Schull, County Cork. Five of the crew were killed and the sixth man was badly injured, the announcement said.

Persons in the vicinity said the plane was seen moving over the bay emitting smoke. It blazed furiously after the crash.

Schull is a little coastal town in southwestern Ireland. Nazi long-range bombers from the French bases have been operating off western Ireland against shipping in the Atlantic.

LABOR UNION PLOT CHARGED BY FORD

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

International News Service Staff Correspondent

WAYS, Ga., Feb. 5—Henry Ford declared in an interview today that industry created labor unions, and that industry did it "for one purpose only"—to put the Ford Motor Co. out of business.

"The whole thing is to get the Ford Motor Company out of the picture because of our competition and the high wages we pay," he said.

"Unions, according to Ford, were 'born in iniquity and will go the same way.'"

"I positively know," Ford asserted, "that a big industrial combination—a clique that owns large industries other than the Ford Company—are behind unions. Their one purpose is to get control, raise prices and cut wages. 'You can't cut wages and raise prices and have good times in America. Nothing will spoil the country quicker than such a policy.'"

"I thoroughly believe in paying wages in proportion to the profits. It is the profits that build up and perpetuate an institution."

"There is no necessity of building up an institution unless you pay good wages because unless you pay good wages you will not have a market."

TALKS ON PROFITS

"If the Ford Company could be put out of the picture, wages would come down and prices would go up."

Ford made this unusual statement very carefully.

Ford was the originator of high wages in industry. It was this famous automobile manufacturer of Detroit who years ago instituted the $5 a day minimum wage—a revolutionary step. Subsequently, he inaugurated the five-day week. The 77-year-old multi-millionaire manufacturer said it simply in explaining that it was better for any man to "do his job right" and "the money angle will take care of itself."

"The reason so many men fail in business," he said, "is that they have their minds and their eyes on money."

CALLS WAR HOAX

When I heard up the subject of war, Ford touched upon the topic briefly and concisely, declining to amplify his views.

"War is just a hoax all the way through," he said.

Ford attributed the cause of the war to "idleness." He made it clear that he abhors war. He hopes neither side will win. He said he would not be surprised if the war ended in a stalemate.

He said he is for a negotiated peace of disarmament with "pure speculation" for him to say whether the United States is leaning toward war. He was positive, however, that "the present state of the American people are against entering the war."

"Do you think Germany has designs on the United States?" he was asked.

"No, they have no thought of it," he replied.

Ford left no doubt of his willingness to co-operate with American people in aiding national defense. He assumed that war was taken for granted by everybody. He made evident his lack of interest in war profits. He pointed out that he had announced he is willing to manufacture anything the government wants at cost if other manufacturers of defense materials do the same.

"I am against war profiteering," Ford declared.

Camp Workers' Gift Plane to Britain Flies Over Edwards

CAMP EDWARDS, Feb. 5—A gift plane for Great Britain, representing contributions totaling $60,000 from 20,000 workers here, soared over the camp here today in an exhibition flight at a cruising speed of 350 miles an hour.

The plane, a Curtiss Tomahawk, was piloted by Barton House of Buffalo, N. Y. It had previously been planned to land the plane, so that it might be seen at close range by the workers, but this plan was later changed.

The flight took place under ideal weather conditions, and soon after winning its way over the camp the plane was on its way to Washington.

Bishop Talks On Niemöller

BERLIN, Feb. 5 (INS)—The Rev. Martin Niemöller, the "fighting pastor" and World War U-boat commander whose sermons at the Dahlem Church landed him in a concentration camp, has been in touch with Bishop Freysing of Berlin regarding his plan to join the Roman Catholic Church, it was revealed today.

Opposition to the move is understood to have arisen, particularly among Niemöller's Dahlem followers, who fear the entire Dahlem Protestant community may disintegrate if Niemöller surrenders his pulpit.

According to informed circles, Niemöller's wife has advised him against such a step.

Legion Mission Flies to London

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (AP)—A four-man American Legion mission, headed by National Comdr. Milo J. Warner, started for London by clipper plane today to "look, listen and learn" about civilian defense methods in England.

"We will study civilian defense conditions and programs in order to provide information for the American Legion that will best enable it to serve in the defense of the United States," said Warner. "What we see over there will have much to do with determining what we do here."

Eight passengers were aboard the Yankee Clipper when it left for London at 6:30 a. m.

Halifax, Hull Discuss 'General Situation'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5 (AP)—Viscount HALIFAX, the British ambassador, conferred with Secretary Hull today on what he described as "the general situation."

Halifax told reporters he had not discussed questions of economic warfare or any other specific problem, but had confined himself to a general discussion of matters of common interest to this country and Britain.

England Must Conquer or Perish, Admiralty Warns

CROYDEN, Eng., Feb. 5 (INS)—When the German invasion-offensive is launched Great Britain "must conquer or perish," A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty declared today.

"There is no strategem which won't be employed, and no device so foul that the Germans won't use it," he said. "We shall have to meet the onslaught single-handed—and we must conquer or perish."

BATISTA TIGHTENS CUBA GRIP

HAVANA, Cuba, Feb. 5 (AP)—President Fulgencio Batista tightened apparently stronger than ever after uncovering what he termed a "sedition plot," was reported today to have told congressional leaders that constitutional guarantees he suspended for 15 days might be extended at that time.

The Cuban president conferred with congressional leaders last night, expressing the view that the order already had been rescinded.

A joint session of the Senate and House was called for 6 p. m. today to hear a message from Batista, which many expected would include a request for restoration of the constitution.

Batista suspended the constitutional guarantees early yesterday to restore his control of the situation after ousting Col. Jose Pedernera, head of the army and chief of the national police, and Col. Angel Gonzalez, head of the navy. Lieut. Col. Bernardo Garcil had "resigned" Saturday as national police chief in the initial stage of the strike.

The president accused the three of participating in a plot he said would have overthrown the government and resulted in his assassination.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 5 (INS)—Five Cuban officials ousted by President Fulgencio Batista following a plot to seize control of the government, have arrived in Miami.

Those aboard the plane were Col. Jose Pedernera, chief of staff of the army, accompanied by his wife and three children; Lieut. Col. Angel Gonzalez, commander of the navy; Col. Desiderio Garcia, police chief; Col. Pedro Sierra, his wife and two children, and Capt. Owen Parr.

New War Aims Quiz in Commons

LONDON, Feb. 5 (INS)—A new and futile attempt was made in the House of Commons today to elicit a full statement of British war aims.

Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, asked whether consultations between Britain and her allies on the subject had been completed and whether a statement could be expected at an early date.

Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs Richard Austin Butler replied:

"There is nothing to add to earlier answers."

"How long is this procrastination and delay going to go on?" Mander asked.

"Don't you realize there is the greatest interest throughout the world about our peace aims."

"Don't you realize it is not enough to say we simply want to beat Hitler? The people want something further than that."

3 Nazi Bombers Down in Channel

Previously a Nazi bomber was shot down in the English Channel after an air attack on a British ship.

British Closing On Two Africa Capitals

CAIRO, Feb. 5 (AP)—British columns which have driven two-thirds of the way across eastern Libya in less than two months and two-thirds of the way across Eritrea in a fortnight were reported closing in today to speed showdown fights for the Italian colonial capitals of Bengasi and Asmara.

LAVAL'S STATUS WEIGHED

VICHY, France, Feb. 5 (AP)—Chief of State Philippe Petain conferred today with Naval Minister Admiral Jean Darlan and War Minister Charles Huntziger, and it was expected his council of ministers would meet to consider reported demands for return of Pierre Laval to a prominent place in the French government.

Authorized sources said the negotiations between Laval, former vice-premier and foreign minister under Petain, and the Vichy government were completely amicable.

German authorities, these sources said, are taking no part in the negotiations, which were reported to concern only domestic arrangements within France.

The latest proposal under consideration, it was reported authoritatively, is that a four-man instead of three-man directorate be formed in the government with Paul Baudouin, former secretary of state for the presidency of the council, in charge of economic affairs; Huntziger, of the military; and Laval and Darlan as the other two members.

The question of which ministries would go to Laval and Darlan remained, but it was expected one would receive the interior ministry and the other the foreign affairs portfolio.

Bomb Kills Woman In British Consulate

BUDAPEST, Feb. 5 (INS)—One woman was killed and another seriously injured when a time bomb exploded in the British consulate building at Zagreb, it was reported today. Both women were Yugoslavians.

The British were reported with in 100 miles of the eastern Libyan capital and big Fascist base at Bengasi as they pushed along the coast from the Biblical city of Cirene, captured two days ago in a thrust 60 miles west of fallen Derna.

By taking Cirene, from which Italian Marshal Rodolfo Graziani moved his headquarters less than two weeks ago, the British flanked the nearby Mediterranean port of Apollonia.

SMASH FASCIST COLUMN

Ranging ahead of the troops and tanks, British bombers were reported yesterday to have pounded Italian forces strung out along the road to Bengasi, mowing down soldiers and wrecking 20 to 30 of their vehicles. The bombers also struck close to Bengasi, raiding railway facilities and bombing Barca and Berka, air fields for the capital.

Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell was reported last night to have supervised personally the speeded impetus of his East African army's drive into Eritrea where the British said they were "nearing Cheren," 40 miles northwest of Asmara and 60 miles from the Red Sea port of Massaua.

A British military source predicted at London last night that Wavell's forces would take Massaua within a week. He added, however, that the British have been in contact so far with only 30,000 to 40,000 Italians of Premier Mussolini's East African force of perhaps 250,000 men.—Editor's note.

Germany Places Bicycle Ban on Polish Workers

BERLIN, Feb. 5 (AP)—Authorized sources said today that Polish workers in Germany had been denied the right to own or use bicycles, primarily because steel and rubber were scarce. The Polish were said to have shown lack of "discipline" resulting in accidents on Berlin streets.

Greeks Claim New Advances

ATHENS, Feb. 5 (AP)—Important enemy positions were taken in Greek attacks which netted "many prisoners" and quantities of Italian arms and munitions, the Greek high command reported today.

The war bulletin did not say on what part of the Albanian battlefield the gains were made. Reports reaching Athens said Greek scouting forces had been slipping through Italian lines under cover of rain and severing Italian communications.

A government spokesman said the Greeks were "maintaining the offensive" north of Klisura, and that the "enemy was busy organizing and fortifying with barbed wire the positions to which they retreated."

R. I. Athlete-Flier Dies Fighting in RAF

The name of another American youth was added today to the roll of those who made the supreme sacrifice for Britain's cause.

A cable from the British war department revealed that Francis Dean Carragher, 26, former athletic star at Rhode Island State University and until recently a lieutenant in the U. S. Army Air Corps, died in action during an air battle over Manchester, England.

The cable, bearing news of the tragedy, came to Carragher's mother, Mrs. Amy Cranston, formerly of Edgewood, R. I., now living in Elm Grove ave., Providence. Mrs. Cranston is now in Dallas, Texas, visiting a daughter, Mrs. C. N. Anderson.

The young flier was the son of the late Sidney Francis Carragher, a native of England. An athlete during his university days, he was a member of the class of 1938, and was graduated with the degree of bachelor of science.

He was a member of the varsity football squad, the wrestling and track teams and the debating team. During his freshman year he was business manager of the freshman manual and was later an editor of The Beacon, the university's weekly student paper. He was also a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

Carragher had been a flier with the United States Army at Mitchell Field and later at Dallas, Tex.

Carragher resigned his U. S. commission last summer, and friends said he flew across the ocean last fall in a fighting plane built in this country for the British.

Bulgaria Warned On Tourist Army

LONDON, Feb. 5 (AP)—Authoritative circles in London said today efforts had been received of "a good deal of infiltration of so-called tourists" into Bulgaria and declared the Balkan nation faces the time fate as Rumania unless she takes the necessary steps.

These circles expressed belief that the Bulgarians desired to maintain their independence and that "there is no reason to doubt" they are eager to stay out of war.

Heavy Ship Toll Claimed by Nazis

BERLIN, Feb. 5 (INS)—The staggering total of 6000 tons of British shipping was said yesterday, authoritative German circles stated today.

Of this total, it was claimed, a German warship operating overseas sank 30,000 tons and a German U-boat sank 200.

The remainder was accounted for by German bombers, including a 1,000-ton vessel sent to the bottom northwest of Ireland, authorities declared.

RAF IN BIG RAID ON FRENCH COAST

LONDON, Feb. 5 (AP)—The Royal Air Force carried out a wide sweeping daylight raid over the French coast today, British sources said, after their biggest night aerial offensive in two weeks.

Observers on the coast of Kent saw a strong force of bombers.

protected by heavy formations of fighting planes, soar high over the Straits of Dover in the direction of Calais. Other fighting planes patrolled the English coast.

A similar widespread daylight attack was made on Nazi-occupied territory last Sunday.

Some time after the British planes moved to the French coast, a thick column of black smoke was seen rising near the harbor of Calais.

The ministry of information later termed the raid "a successful sweep over northern France."

In last night's attack the German industrial town of Duesseldorf in the Rhineland, the Nazi-held French ports of Cherbourg, Brest, Bordeaux, Dunkirk, Dieppe and Ostend were hit by the British, the air ministry said.

Berlin admitted the Duesseldorf raid and said five civilians were killed and 24 wounded, but that no "war vital objectives were hit."—Editor's note.

Clouds prevented the British pilots from fully observing the results of their work, but on the whole it was regarded as satisfactory, the ministry said. Four British planes failed to return.

THE RAF WOUNDED HEROES SPEAK

Copyright 1941 by New England Newspaper Publishing Co. All rights reserved.
Passed by the British and Canadian Censors

MONTREAL, Que., Canada, Feb. 5—Few things are more stiffly formal, more tersely impersonal than a British war office bulletin. Those occasional for-valor-in-battle announcements, for example, the preamble of which always read "The King is graciously pleased . . ." and then step into the citations with the brisk precision of a drumbeat. They are laconic as notice of a traffic violation—as is the case with Montreal's "Pat" Christie, twice cited and twice decorated.

Muscular, blocky Flight Lieutenant Christie, now in his middle twenties, wears the thin, purple-striped ribbon of the Distinguished Flying Cross, plus one "bar." At the moment he is Canada's leading war ace who carries cicatrized fragments of sharpnel in his thighs and a long, purple scar from wrist to left shoulder where flames from a burning petrol tank seared the flesh. But his citation says nothing about these matters, just "this officer has shown outstanding ability and leadership over a long period of air operations. He is keen and determined and has destroyed at least seven planes." Just that and nothing more!

At the moment "Pat," son of a McGill University professor and born George Patterson Christie, is "resting" briefly from overseas flights, "rest" meaning frequent ski excursions into the Laurentians, rounds of racquets, roof garden whirls and daily acrobatic at the air training center. For Pat is a restless, high voltage male with a preponderance of animal whizz.

DONATED SEVEN PLANES

"At least seven planes," reads the official citation! The actual number must be nearer twenty, for in the hurly-burly of mass combat where enemy planes tumble from the vortex of a mad merry-go-round, credit is "pooled" by the British Air Force. They're merely one or more for the RAF, and nothing for anonymous officers who shot them down.

"A pilot sometimes can't tell himself whether he's brought a Nazi ship down," said Christie, sitting in the upholstered comfort of his West Mount library. "He might get in a close burst, see his tracer going into the Nazi's cockpit, and watch the plane nose down in a perpendicular dive. But whether the plane crashes or levels off under the clouds and dumps off safely, he can only guess."

But there was no doubt about the Italian bomber which Christie met in the middle of the blitz—as singular a saga of the air as this writer has heard. For Christie crashed a five-man Fiat into the Mediterranean sea without firing a shot.

"We were patrolling the Cote d'Azur," he related, "a lazy job because the Italians weren't very bold about venturing away from their bases in daylight. So it resolved into a kind of tourist excursion, up and down the rocky coast of Marseille among the changing moods and colors of the sky."

One late afternoon Christie was hazing over the irregular coastline, watching the upper air for suspicious specks and . . . suddenly wot-ho! There, incredibly, was a big Fiat bomber humming leisurely along over Marseille docks and snapping reconnaissance photos like a tourist.

"STUPID CRUST"

"It was a piece of stupid crust," said Pat. "So I thought, 'Uh-o, a mouse trap, huh?' I figured that somewhere up in the sky, in some nice thick, cream puff cloud, there was a nest of Italian fighters waiting to spring the trap. So I climbed to about 22,000, scouted around—always with an eye on my bomber. Not a fighter in sight, not a cloud to hide in." Christie nosed his Spitfire down a steep dive, gauging his 450 m.p.h. swoop until the Fiat was entered between the cross hairs of his gun sight. At the proper moment his thumb pressed the synchronized gun controls which should have sent bullets converging at 10,000 per minute.

Nothing happened! The gun mechanism was jammed! Nothing to do but to scoot back to the home and put the plane in the shop for repairs.

"I barked away feeling prettyasperated," said Christie. "I could see that the Italian crew was acting jittery. So I circled around and tried again, thinking maybe the jam would untangle somehow. But, no! Those dash-link guns wouldn't give off a single cough."

This time Christie was genuinely angry. The Fiat was wriggling and squirming furiously, losing height rapidly in fluttery circles. To answering machine gun bursts came from its rear gunners, no ill-tale tracer streaks.

"So I kept feinting and diving in quick, cautious dips," said Christie. "My Spitfire was like a nervous flea—a sensitive little craft."

DIDN'T FIRE A SHOT

It was a cat-and-mouse contest, with Christie heading the Fiat off in its attempts to race for Italy, turning it back and driving it down and ever down. He perceived that hysteria had seized the Italian pilot, that the crew and gunners were making no attempt to fight. So, increasingly bold, he dived closer and more insistently until the Fiat was near to the sea-surface.

Editor's Note—This story by Austen Lake is the ninth of a series we order to be the best yet produced for newspaper publication since the war began. Lake went to Canada in a great hope, lesser expectation, of being able to talk with RAF heroes invalided home from the Battle of Britain. With the permission of the RAF and Canadian censors, granted for the first time, he has tapped this store of true, breathless adventure stories. The result is a series that breathes of raw courage and deathless effort in high endeavor—the stories of those "so few" whom Churchill said that never in all history had so many owed so much.

"I knew they couldn't tell that my guns were out of commission," he continued. "I can't bear machine guns rattling with bomber-motors full on. So I took one last dummy dive, mostly out of mischief and never expecting the Fiat to do anything but scuttle away unharmed. I came closer and steeper this time—my last chance a false threat, when . . . to my complete amazement the Fiat nose keelplunk, into the sea."

"I watched from a few hundred feet as the bomber floated, began to settle and the crew jumped out with their inflated jackets. And after a bit a French patrol boat came steaming out from the shore and picked the crew up. Well, air, I didn't dare to tell the squadron mess about it, because I knew they'd just pinch their noses and give me the laugh. So I simply made out a brief report and filed it with the commanding officer, without mention of the jammed guns."

The C. O. read Christie's report, received confirmation from the Marseille authorities and came over to Pat's hut.

"See here, Christie," said the skipper, "You're a bit shy on your data. How many rounds did you fire?"

"None," Christie answered sheepishly, to the amazed incredulity of his superior. "Not a shot!"

Checkup in the hangar, where the Spitfire was being overhauled, proved that every bullet in each of the eight gun-belts was in place.

There were other fights, some in swirling masses of English and enemy formations, and a few with isolated fighters, cut off from the herd. Sometimes Christie brought his victim in a few staccato seconds and sometimes he jockeyed for minutes before squeezing his gun-button and watching his fire eat into the metal sides of a Messerschmidt.

"Can't explain it," he pondered, "sometimes I'd give the guns a quick second's burst, and down the fellow would tumble. Other times I'd get him squarely in my sights and give him a good dose and nothing would happen—just didn't happen to hit a vital spot."

Then came the day over the mouth of the Rhine that Christie himself was knocked down. He was fighting an escort of Messerschmidts while the Nazi bombers went on to bomb London.

"There were plenty of them," he said, "and I recall seeing two of the ships collide in a terrible smash—almost head on. It was the first time that I'd seen that happen and I must have let my attention wander. For, the next minute, bam! In the flash of an eye my cockpit was a churning mass of flame and I remember putting my arm up to shield my face—that's where I got this burn."

"Fortunately the blast and semi-explosion must have forced my glass hood back and blown me out into the air. Because I found myself falling—boy! I'll never forget the sudden, delicious sensation of that cool air as I plunged down. I felt around cautiously as I tumbled to see how badly I was hurt, seemed almost as though I had lost the sense of feeling. I recall taking a careful look at my burned sleeve and seeing red, raw, glistening flesh of the arm where the skin had stripped away in milky-white strips. And presently, with a bit of a shock, I realized that I was plunging toward the ground at 120 m.p.h., and if I wanted to live I'd better yank that ripcord.

"How long I fell I have no recollection now, but it must've been close to a minute. I remember thinking about my burning plane and worrying whether it would fall somewhere inland in an English town."

On the ground below surgeons were waiting near by with ambulances and medical kits, ready to attend both English and enemy fliers. So soon after he hit the water, where he floated around in his Mae West, he was bundled in wads of oil-soaked cotton and gauze, being rushed toward a base for skin grafts and convalescence.

"The real story in my outfit," said Christie, "is about my squadron leader, Douglas Bader—a legless chap, who has performed miracles in the air."

Bader, commanding the All-Canadian squadron, which Christie is a member, had lost both legs in a pre-war air accident, one member being amputated just above the knee, and the other close to the hip. But when war came, the RAF waived its usual physical regulations and, in the frantic need for experienced pilots, let Bader fly a Hurricane with the aid of artificial limbs.

Not only that but he is 34, far beyond the limit allowed by strict RAF rules for a fighter pilot.

"TLL SHOW YOU"

The authorities tried to "ground him," related Christie. "But Bader said, 'I'll show you,' jumping into a Hurricane and virtually making the ship talk. He could do more with a plane without his legs than most RAF pilots could with both of theirs. So when he came down he just said: 'What about it gentlemen?' They shrugged and marked him fit and he's been at it ever since."

Christie was married last week in one of the major social events of the Montreal winter. The interior of Christ Church Cathedral was banked with blossoms and crowded to the doors with friends. Now for a few brief weeks he is honeymooning with his bride. Then for a short spell he will establish his home. And soon, very soon, he will receive a manila envelope franked "On H. M. S." and read the terse, blunt order inside: "Lieutenant G. P. Christie is ordered to immediate duty in England . . ." His momentary paradise is bubble-trail.

Tomorrow Austen Lake will recount other feats of those reckless RAF heroes who dare the Nazi air might with insurmountable courage.

CELEBRITIES ATTEND 'BACK STREET' FLORIDA PREMIERE

15,000 in Crush To Glimpse Stars

By PEGGY DOYLE

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 5—Vacationing sun-kissed front streeters as well as a delegation of pale-faces representing 150 newspapers throughout the country took a "Back Street" detour when the Charles Boyer-Margaret Sullivan co-starring production was world-premiered here.

You've heard of double-features—this was a double world-premier at the Lincoln and Cameo Theaters with a parade of grade-A stage, screen and radio personalities doubling at both houses before the showing of the Universal picture.

It was the biggest opening ever held in this winter vacation spot, more than 15,000 persons jamming the streets between the two theaters.

DEANNA THE WINNER

Public darling No. 1—Deanna Durbin—was easily the winner in the Kleig Light Row Sweepstakes. The loudly admiring throngs needing to be restrained by Florida's finest to effect her safe entry and exit at both houses.

America's ideal girl was wearing for this exciting occasion a white silk organza dress. Its great flared skirt embroidered with a gleaming iridescent bowknot. A white fox stole and gardenias.

Deanna's presence at the premiere ceremonies is a gracious gesture of appreciation towards Producer Manning, who collaborated in writing six of the Deanna Durbin pictures. Although she isn't in the "Back Street" cast, she wined Manning she "wouldn't miss" the premiere of his first production.

On the way over to the "type-writer bowl frolics," held in the swanky Biltmore Country Club ballroom following the showing of the picture, the talk was chiefly of Miss Sullivan's sensitive portrayal of the celebrated Fanny Hurst heroine and of Boyer's excellent characterization of the successful Walter Saxel whose wife and whose mistress discovered his selfishness, not each other, to be their chief rival.

These are truly startling performances and this late-a screen version of the 10-year-old best-seller is likely to out-distance even the fabulously successful "Kitty Foyle" at the country's box-offices.

MANY CELEBRITIES

Jack Dempsey, who is playing host to his two small daughters; "Slapsie Maxie" Rosenbloom, angler of the human fish stunt in the Alexander Quid's water follies the other afternoon.

Broadway and Hollywood's Peggy Feas and Hearst Columnist Walter Winchell are among the many celebrities who shared the spotlight with Miss Durbin at the country club festivities.

Others were George Ade, Sailing Baruch, Francis Lederer, Major Albert Warner, Bernard Gimbel, Tré Husong, Betty Lawford, Mitzzy Mayfair, the Damon Runyons, Danton Walker and Milton Berle.

Sammy Walsh, who is well known to Eastonians, was the master of ceremonies, assisted by Don Lanning.

Earlier in the day, the newspapermen and women visited Hialeah Park as Universal's guests. The bets were not on the cuff and not a few of the boys and girls are glad the meals are.

Other events in this smoothly managed premiere junket were a deep-sea fishing expedition which

'Kitty Foyle' Launches Its 6th Week at Keith Memorial

Ginger Rogers Film a Sensation

"Kitty Foyle" now stands out front not merely as a big hit. Now it enters the sensation class, for this picture starring Ginger Rogers today breezes into its sixth week at the Keith Memorial.

Christopher Morley's novel about the Philadelphia working girl who loved, wed and then had the break away from a high society just in went up among the best sellers last year, and now the film version made by Dalton Trumbo and directed by Sam Wood is matching it as a general favorite.

Miss Rogers is the ideal actress for the part of the Foyle girl. Her portrayal combines sweetness and sincerity, especially in her scenes with Dennis Morgan, who appears as the blue-blooded Wyn Sinclair. Morgan makes good in his first leading-man role, and he does James Craig, who steps into the picture as the young doctor who also wants to marry Kitty.

In other roles that go to make "Kitty Foyle" the biggest success that ever reached the Keith screen are Eduardo Cinnelli, Ernest Conarty, Cecil Cunningham, Gladys Cooper, Walter Kingsford, Odette Mytil, Kay Linaker, Nita Walker and the bright little Richard Niles, who is seen as the Stafford boy and is every inch a kid who knows his way around.

Maria Montez Scores Casino Dancing Hit

Featured in this week's Casino burlesque are Maria Montez, Nina Ford, Joan Rydell, Lee Karmel, Elinor Walent, Charlie Naps, Polly (Bumps) Mack and Edna Ernie. Miss Montez, dancing newswoman, is hailed as a charming addition to the Casino favorites. The show is a fine medley of fun and entertainment from start to finish. Check Gregory's line of dancing girls, and the pep and grace to the ensemble.

Reverend Brother P. J. Ryan, of the Irish Christian Brothers, was after seeing the picture.

"When I saw it the two hours appeared to me like so many minutes as I lived again in the presence of towns, cities, counties and scenery that, in my youth, thrilled, and let me frankly add, the remembrance of which, in years of exile, has caused joy and silent tears."

OPENING SOON

STILL UNDER SNOW

And Boston's Blizzard Is Ten Days Old

Snow

Sections of Boston's busiest thoroughfare, Washington st., still bear the mark of the city's 10-day-old snow storm ... making driving hazardous. Slushy streets bother the pedestrian, too.

UNCLEARED STREETS PERILOUS

Ten days ago the blizzard hit Boston.

Today, the condition of the streets and sidewalks in certain sections of the city was deplorable, with many motorists and pedestrians subject to long delays.

Fire hydrants still buried in heaps of snow alarmed occupants of frame houses and other fire hazards. On some streets, women, alarmed over the number of fires which have occurred within the last few days, shovelled the hydrants clear for their own protection.

On many streets, cars which should park horizontally to the curb, were forced into parallel parking.

Reed st., in the South End, is still unplowed, according to storekeepers there. Six cars and two trucks were held up there more than an hour. Pedestrians are unable to cross the street at the East Lenox st. intersection, it is stated, and children have built snow men there.

In the vicinity of City Hospital and Beacon Hill, cars were over the hub caps in snow, and icy ruts endangered the lives of pedestrians who in many places were unable to walk on the sidewalks.

By E. V. DURLING

THE GRIM PROSPECT that the ultimate winner in the present European war will be not the Axis Powers nor the Allied Powers, but RED RUSSIA, is no longer in the realm of prophecy. It is now in the realm of FACT.

Karl Von Wiegand, distinguished and authoritative foreign correspondent, tells us in a recent dispatch from Tokyo:

"Stalin has WON EVERY PLAY since the European and Asiatic wars began.

"After sixteen months of war in Europe and three and a half years in Asia, THE RED DICTATOR HAS BEEN THE SOLE VICTOR THUS FAR.

"His loot includes a third of Poland, all the Baltic provinces, a fifth of the former state of Finland, and all of Bessarabia.

"Stalin is the only statesman in the world who can truthfully say every day that the war is prolonged is a day gained for the further undermining and collapse of the tottering capitalist system.

"SOVIET RUSSIA'S IMPERIALISTIC FUTURE LIES IN THE RUINS AND DESPAIR OF EUROPE AND THE CHAOS OF ASIA."

In spite of such happenings or in defiance of them, the New Deal Administration in Washington has lifted the moral embargo against Russia, and has thus permitted the Reds to acquire our tools, airplanes, drilling equipment and aviation gasoline.

These valuable commodities—each necessary to the efficient operation of a modern military machine—may, if Stalin so wishes, be turned over to Hitler under the Russian-German trade agreement.

No wonder millions of Americans are asking such pertinent questions as:—

Why should the American Government, having justifiably declared a moral embargo against Russia for "a performed deed that was not courageous" in Finland, now condone that deed?

Why should the United States, as Under Secretary of State Welles recently said, be "happy to inform" Red Russia that our government no longer considers the moral embargo applicable to the Soviet Union?

Is this not an American contribution to Stalin's victories and an approval of his loot?

And if Stalin turns over to his friend Hitler the materials he can now obtain in America, cannot the United States be accused of giving indirect assistance to the Nazi war effort?

IN A WORLD GONE MAD with wars and preparation for war, there are still wise and devoted minds whose every effort is to substitute creative civilization for destructive barbarism.

Among these is Mrs. E. K. Strong, president of the California Congress of Parents and Teachers. Her recent address in Santa Monica to the P.-T. A.'s first district, admirably expressed our hope for future generations.

"Our first duty to our country is still the advancement of child welfare. It is up to parents to train our youth to solve, think and know that our democracy can and will plan a way out of all difficulties better than all other forms of government.

"We must continue to impress our children at home and in school with the principles of our democracy. Each classroom is a miniature democracy and so is the home."

And then she added, with quiet and impressive emphasis, what every mother and father in the country prays day and night:

"I hope we are not going to enter this war. For what happens now is going to affect our children deeply in the years to come."

All this is good, sound American sense. It reflects the genius of a nation that has always preferred to build and increase, to the devil's work of tearing down and dissipating all things that are noble, fruitful and beautiful.

We need citizens who are strong, industrious, independent and patriotic. We need them to perpetuate our own freedom and to show the way to those misled, unhappy and desperate peoples whose only idea of a just tribunal is the sword.

"NOTHING'S WRONG with marriage; it is the greatest security to a child and the utmost satisfaction to the adult."

This is the firm conviction of Dr. James C. Janney, distinguished Boston University professor.

In this cynical age, when the honored and provenly valuable things of the past are constantly ridiculed by warped minds, it is good to hear favorable mention of the home and family.

Despite divorce statistics, modern marriages are not failures, and Dr. Janney is eminently right when he says:

"The young mothers of today make better wives and chaperones than their mothers, and they are stricter and even less erring in family life."

TO MAKE this country a better place for husbands. To guard the liberties of married men and oppose vigorously anything tending to hinder their pursuit of happiness. Long has this been our policy. We are, therefore greatly pleased when learning our efforts are not entirely in vain. Writes a grateful husband: "I read to my wife your splendid suggestion that the way to make a husband happy was to serve him good food artistically. This morning I found two cherries daintily placed on my heretofore cherryless grapefruit. Beside my plate was a note from the little lady: 'Breakfast being served artistically. Poached eggs decorated with parsley to follow.'"

PASSING BY: Bing Crosby, Hollywood's most enthusiastic family man. Has, as the world well knows, four children. Also has four brothers and two sisters all of whom are married and have a varying number of children. When the Crosby clan gathered at Christmas, Bing donned the traditional costume of Santa Claus. However, one of his nephews cried out "take off the whiskers and sing, Uncle Bing, we know you." So Bing shed the whiskers and sang as he passed out the presents: "When It Rains It Rains Pennies From Heaven" ... Grantland Rice, Veteran sportscribe. Born in Murfreesboro, Tenn. And educated at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, where he made Phi Beta Kappa. First job he had was in a dry-goods store. Worked at this exactly 23 minutes and quit and hasn't been in a dry-goods store since. "Grant" is an extremely brilliant poet, his most famous four lines being: And when the last great scorer comes, To write against your name, He'll ask not if you won or lost But how you played the game.

CONFIDENTIAL: As far as I know, the now and then comic actor, W. C. Fields, is the only man in the country who has a New England boiled dinner for breakfast. Among the innumerable inventions inspired by weariness or laziness is the detachable shirt collar. In Troy, N. Y., in 1825, Mrs. Hanna Montague tired of washing her husband's entire shirt when only the collar was soiled, cut off the collar and made it detachable. . . . Can honestly say I enjoy tipping pleasant, efficient, friendly people and often wish I could afford to tip more. I view a tip not as a "gratuity" but as an expression of good will. However, it burns me almost to a crisp to know that in many places tips are considered by the employers as something to be applied to wages. Why, I ask again and again, should the patron take care of an employer's pay-roll?

MY DAY

WASHINGTON, Tuesday—I was interested last evening to talk to four more of the young people who are down here as government internets for the winter. I think I have mentioned these young people before. Ex-Congressman Davenport shepherds this group and I usually see them in one large gathering some evening during the winter.

This year it happens that a number of them had some tie with friends of mine and I have had an opportunity to see five of them more informally.

They are all extremely interested and seem to be getting a great deal out of their actual work in some government department or in assisting in one of the congressional offices.

An amusing incident, was the discovery by Mrs. Robert Baker, whose husband is professor of astronomy at the University of Illinois, and who lives in Urbana, that one of the young people was the daughter of another professor who lived only two blocks from the Baker home. They had to come to Washington, however, to meet!

BECAUSE I had been unable to see some of the "March of Time" movies, I asked to have them shown over again for my benefit last evening.

The one in which Mr. Quentin Reynolds is the narrator, that begins with the singing of carols on Christmas eve, the night when Mr. Reynolds was starting back to the United States, was one of the most moving news reels I have ever seen.

How utterly weary people must be, sleeping night after night, herded like animals on the tube platforms in London. I could not help wondering how they could go on day after day to work with such unrefreshing rest.

To me, it is air at night that matters almost as much as sleep. We also saw a short reel showing what is being done under the Maritime Commission to encourage the building up of our merchant marine and the training of our men for this service. It is a most interesting film and one which I hope will be widely distributed commercially.

MISS MARY MARGARET McBRIDE spent last night with us and left this morning by plane from New York City. She has been in Florida on an advertising program, but we talked of much besides Florida because I always find her a charming and delightful person with a wide range of interests.

I lunched today with Mrs. Frank Walker, wife of the postmaster-general, and it was a delightful party. Soon this round of gaiety with the wives of the cabinet will be brought to a close.

In the spring, there are lunches for various congressional wives' groups, but they are not scheduled quite so closely together.

REBUKE LOOMS FOR LaGUARDIA

By Leonard Lyons

Mayor LaGuardia

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—TEACHERS UNION: the next charge by Senator Couder's investigating committee will involve favoritism in marking the papers of Leftist students at Brooklyn College . . . HOWARD CHANDLER CHRISTY: Lowell Mellett of the White House staff now is making the arrangements concerning the co-operation of the best-known illustrators in the country, in making posters for our national defense . . .

MAYOR LaGUARDIA: An attack against you is expected to be made at the Civil Liberties Union dinner next week. It will be directed against your posing for photos showing you throwing banned books into a fire—even though the books were obscene . . . JOE MARTIN, JR.: Werner Schroeder, the Republican National Committee man from Illinois, now is the dark horse to succeed you as chairman of the Rep. Natl. Comm.

CORDELL HULL: When the President and Charlie Chaplin were introduced, F. D. opened the conversation by laughing and saying: "You're giving us a lot of trouble in South America." He referred to the banning of "The Great Dictator."

PROOKS COSTUME CO.: At the "Cuff-Links" dinner given at the White House last week each of the guests was supposed to come dressed as somebody else. When Eleanor Roosevelt entered the room she discovered that she was the only one in costume—so she returned to her room and changed into a formal gown. Eleanor had come dressed as "Whistler's Mother."

CLIFFORD ODETS: Boris Aronson, the scenic designer who is making the sets for your new play, now possesses one of the rarest Christmas cards in the country. It was sent to him a few days before the New Year and expressed good wishes for the coming year of 1940 . . . The "O" then was crossed out and a "1" substituted, to correct the figure to "1941" . . . That card, revealing a simple error in writing numerals, was sent to him by the world's greatest mathematician—Albert Einstein" . . . J. EDGAR HOOVER: Courtney Ryley Cooper, your biographer, who committed suicide recently, wrote his own epitaph. His widow disclosed it last week. Cooper, during a party with other newspaper men, had participated in an epitaph game and submitted his own: "I had to make a deadline to get new" . . . GROUP THEATER: Pietro di Donato, whose dramatization of "Christ in Concrete" you wanted to produce, is finishing his new book instead. He'll call it "The Golden Bowl" . . . AL JOLSON: Your co-producer had five doctors backstage watching you at the last performance of "Hold on to Your Hats" in an attempt to obtain evidence that you were not too sick to continue the run.

HARRY W. CHASE: The "George K. Arthur" enrolled in your N. Y. U. classes and who just passed his exams in meteorology and navigation is the film star who once teamed with Karl Dane in a series of war movies. Arthur took those courses so that he could obtain a pilot's license . . . SONJA HEINIE: Lew Jenkins, the lightweight champ, now spends all his time ice-skating, and has learned how to figure-skate. He wants to enter the Silver Skates Derby in New York if he can get an A. A. U. card . . . JOSEPH CADDEN: White House displeasure at your American Youth Congress was made known long before last week—when Mrs. Roosevelt declined your invitation to speak. Before the election, when Dorothy Thompson lunched with the President, she discussed her objections to the A. Y. C. "Dorothy," urged the President, "tell it to Eleanor."

SAM SPEWAK, the successful playwright and scenarist, soon may return to his first love, the newspaper business. He has received some offers to become a foreign correspondent again . . . Spewak's first assignment abroad was as Moscow correspondent for the New York World. His experiences in Russia furnished the material for "Clear All Wires" and "Leave It to Me"—hit shows which he and his wife, Bella, wrote . . . Spewak got the Moscow assignment when Lincoln Steffens, who had just returned from Moscow, stopped him and asked: "Sam, what's the difference between Communism, Socialism and Anarchism?" . . . "I don't know," Sam shrugged . . . Steffens turned to Herbert Bayard Swowe, executive editor of the World, and said: "Swowe, here's your ideal man for Moscow."

SONJA HEINIE

THE BOSTON THEATRICAL CUBEBOARD is so bare that the bookers are asking Max Gordon, producer of "My Sister Eileen," to route the lead company of that new hit in this direction . . . Should Producer Gordon assent, Audrey Christie, who plays one of the leads, will establish a record . . . The versatile red-head has played here twice thus far this season.

SHE QUIT HER FIRST Boston show, "Return Engagement," to take the siren's role in "My Sister Eileen" (which wasn't a bit either) . . . In "My Sister Eileen," Audrey is playing opposite her husband, Gay Robertson, for the first time in their careers. Except for stock, the records fail to show a precedent for an actress appearing in these plays in Boston in one season.

BROOKS ATKINSON'S ALLUSION to Gertrude Lawrence as a "godless" while reviewing "Lady in the Dark," has Broadway calling her "Gertrude the Goddess" . . . The conservative Mr. Atkinson wins the prize for the most extravagant praise yet given a stage star . . . Even Hollywood has not dared dub one of its darlings a "goddess" . . . Richard Adrikoff, of N. Y., and Dennis, by the way, calls Miss Lawrence "Gee" . . . He's her husband.

SO MANY AIRPLANES are winging over the sound stages that the studio moguls are begging the army for consideration . . . Boosters for the Boston Municipal Stadium will soon be able to discuss their pet project with former Congressman Joe O'Connell, chairman of the White Fund . . . (The White Fund could legally furnish the funds) . . . The Brighton politician has recovered from a serious illness, and is at home after a hospital stay.

JOE TOYE, EDITORIAL WRITER, is also on the mend . . . But he's berthed at Beth Israel Hospital for the present . . . Charles Van, the piano-playing stagehand, is chief tubthumper for the testimonial honoring George E. Curran . . . The event will take place Thursday at the Elks Club.

IN A VERY MODEST NOTE, Frank Rossi expresses hope for a new Greater Boston playwrighting-acting unit, The Authors Group . . . "A few similar ventures have failed," says Mr. Rossi. "In my estimation, their failure was due to the fact that they were 'big,' therefore, when they lost, they lost 'big'."

THE AUTHORS GROUP will make its debut with Mr. Rossi's comedy, "Take It Easy," and the premiere is set for February 17 at the Peabody Playhouse . . . One paragraph in the Rossi communication will be of certain interest to a host—if we can judge by our mail—of Bostonians . . . It goes: "We sincerely hope, if we meet with any measure of success, that it will encourage authors to submit 'scripts for production'."

TO WHICH WE ADD a "hope" of our own: Will aspiring playwrights kindly try Mr. Rossi (who may possibly be able to do something for them instead of us?) . . . As for hopeful songwriters, it is too much to expect that the shower of manuscripts from this source will abate . . . We can only guarantee not to be able to send them back, such manuscripts . . . Fourteen came in the Monday mail.

MARILYN DUKE'S quick success with Vaughn Monroe's orchestra at the Statler Terrace room has settled the southern girl's immediate future . . . Miss Duke was introduced to Boston as vocalist with Stuart Fraser's good orchestra, at the Copley Plaza Sheraton Room . . . With Vaughn, she's getting a chance to make records . . . Her first, "There'll Be Some Changes Made," surely was not prophetic . . . Marilyn was so good that she'll stay with the Monroe band.

MARILYN DUKE
Her Immediate Future Is Safe

Hollywood Today

SHE'LL BE 'LADY IN THE DARK

By Louella O. Parsons

Irene Dunne

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 5.—Not all the war from New York is news that Colonel Spat in a bid of $200,000 for Gertie Lawrence's sock hit, "Lady In The Dark," before the opening night programs had been thrown away. That, my friends, is the biggest opening shot offered ever made for a stage show and so split the big-bird become between various studios that the boys are now up to $275,000 with Moss Hart still playing coy.

I was most amused to hear that none other than Greta Garbo had sent an emissary backstage to arrange an interview with Moss and that they had a secret hand deal about G. G. starring in the movie version. "I haven't seen the show but from the reviews this fantastic farce about a seduced lady who goes berserk in a psycho-analytic world is a movie natural."

If Garbo should come out the picture itself star Irene Dunne in Lawrence's role.

WITH ALL THE STUDIOS bidding for Lila Hayworth, Harry O. Jones decided to keep her right at home. He made up his mind to do so long time ago but it wasn't until a few days ago that he had a vehicle for her. You may say it is really named with a capital "H" but it is not.

I had a long time ago that Lila Hayworth was about to put her name on a contract. Well, that is what is the picture of her. Lila and Lila and Lila and Lila. Hayworth, standing with Jerome Kern, in her future picture.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD: Cary Grant in the Santa Monica Hospital—a flu sufferer; Quentin Reynolds' brother Jim has been long-distancing Miss Lane every day; Dorothy Lamour received a $10,000 bonus from Paramount and is so proud? The check was given her not only because her pictures make money, but because she is co-operative with every branch of the studio.

Ruth Chatterton opens in her play, "Pygmalion" at the Biltmore Monday night. While in Hollywood she'll be the guest of Jessie and Duell Barthelmess. All of Ruth's friends will be glad to soothe her; seats are going like hot cakes for the Greek air and stage benefit at Grauman's Chinese.

The Charlie Feldmans are entertaining with a party in honor of Lady Mendl following the show and many dinners precede it. Jane Wyman was back on the Warner lot today, the first time since the birth of Maureen Elizabeth; George Raft and Betty Grable did a repeat at the Mocambo last night; Alice Faye becomes Mrs. Martin in "The Great American Broadcast." That ought to come natural to her; Hollywood doesn't always forget its old friends.

Norman Kerry received a consolation when he appeared at the Orpheum Theater that brought tears to his eyes:

DID I TELL YOU—or didn't I yesterday that Buddy De Sylva would move into the top production spot at Paramount? I did! He has been appointed by Y. Frank Freeman to take the place left vacant by William Le Baron. That means that Buddy is going to concentrate on Hollywood instead of Broadway.

His first picture under the new arrangement is Bing Crosby's "Birth of the Blues" and Buddy's first official act was to sign Mary Martin as foreign lead with five-year-old Carolyn Lee as comedy spot. "Rhythm on the River" the first one with Mary and Bing was thoroughly panned by the critics but it fared all right at the box office and that's what counts.

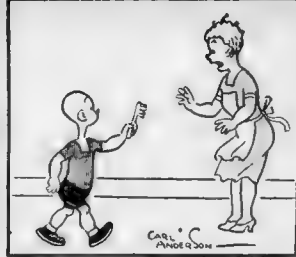

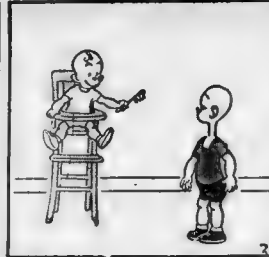

APPARENTLY HAL WALLIS now in New York, was intrigued with "Arsenic and Old Lace" the play about the sweet old ladies who kill 'em and bury 'em in the cellar. He called Jack Warner long distance and said that he had bought the play from the authors, Russel Crouse and Howard Lindsay who also wrote "Life With Father."

Warners may stage Boris Karloff for the part he creates on the stage—that of the crazy brother who thinks he is Karloff. Marjorie Rameau and May Robson are being discussed for the gentle murderers.

Allyn Joslyn, another movie actor, has an important role in the show. The price paid is $100,000 and Warners were glad to pay it because of the competition for film rights.

Lampoon Desert Isle Slur Hit by Runyon

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1941, Home Features Syndicate, Inc. Distributed by International News Service)

To the Editors of the Harvard Lampoon, Cambridge:

Dear Sirs: We see where you recently named Miss Miriam Hopkins, the actress, as the least desirable company on a desert island. We suppose you spoke in jest, but even so we are moved to address you in a spirit of friendly counsel.

We fear you may get the idea that you are really competent to judge of desirable company on a desert island.

Young Gentlemen—boys, if we may be so informal—we implore you to defer judgment of this nature until you have been out of Harvard 20 or 30 years and have had the opportunity of looking around a bit and studying the situation. You will be surprised.

We never met Miss Hopkins, though we have seen her on stage and screen. Of her personality, her mental range, her disposition, we cannot speak with authority. But we assume from her apparent understanding and grasp of her various roles that she has intelligence, which we assure you is not to be despised on a desert island.

PUZZLING CHOICE

There are bound to come nights when you are all tucked out and will want to indulge in a little conversation on the side.

We do not know why you named Miss Hopkins. Possibly it was because of some unreasoning prejudice born of seeing her in one of her lesser histrionic efforts, but it could not have been in a picture of a few years ago called "She Loves Me Not." In that picture, Miss Hopkins played the part of a night club dancer in revealing garb, and the revelation was not bad, boys. Not bad, at all.

We, too, once had our ideas of least desirable company under certain circumstances though in the main we preferred to let our mind dwell on the most desirable.

We do not recall that we were a stickler for a desert island but we do remember that we wanted our most desirable company in some locality so remote as to insure us the complete possession and attention of the company without the sinister presence of some better looking and glibber boy. You see, boys, we were a slow worker.

In our youth, we were generally thinking of Miss Lillian Russell. We carried a little photo of her that came with a pack of cigarettes.

In later years we saw Miss Russell in person and she had apparently fattened up to some extent from her earlier days and that destroyed our love. More recently we had been giving considerable thought to the desirability of Miss Greta Garbo as company on a desert island, but we discovered that she lives on carrots and wants to spend her time on a desert island raising carrots.

WINCHELL TOO

We asked Walter Winchell, the columnist, if he had ever had similar thoughts of the most desirable company on a desert island and he admitted he had.

He said his dream in that respect as a youth was Miss Anna Held, who was popularly supposed to take milk baths. Mr. Winchell said for years he kept thinking of her in those milk baths but when he got older he dismissed her from his mind.

Anyway, boys, we think you under-rate Miss Hopkins, besides being gratuitously unkind to her, which is not at all in keeping with the high traditions of fair Harvard for good breeding and gallantry.

Perhaps after you have been married a while, some of you will be wondering, in the light of your companions on the desert island of matrimony, how you ever had the short-sightedness to nominate an outsider as least desirable company anywhere.

We hope the circulation of the Lampoon is picking up and that you continue to edit with that youthful exuberance characteristic of the last issue in which you speak of Miss Hopkins. Youth is a wonderful thing. Was it George Bernard Shaw who remarked that it is a pity it is wasted on youth?

Cordially,
D. R.
P. S.—You dig up that picture we mention. You may want to apologize to Miss Hopkins after seeing it. Not bad, boys. Not bad.

Ridicule Kills Georgia Bill for Women Jurors

ATLANTA, Feb. 5 (AP)—Bills proposing jury service by Georgia women have expired in various ways—the latest via the ridicule route.

Sen. James R. Park's proposal went on the table for a decisive death after submission of an amendment yesterday providing: "All ladies selected for the jury shall be under 45 years of age, have their original teeth, roses in each cheek, feet not over size 5, hose requirements not under size 9½, beauty parlor treatment the day before, wearing perfume agreeable to the bar and bench, and having within two years won a bathing beauty contest."

MARY X. IMPROVES POSTURE

next time you go to a movie. (I mean this for the ladies . . . the men do, anyhow.)

I find myself looking at posture everywhere now. In the subway, in restaurants, even in church, I'm afraid. Nine out of ten women over 25 "slump down into their girdles." They sort of crumple at the middle, and so do many men.

Bad posture makes you look heavier than you are. The woman who "stands tall" and flattens her waistline is the one who wears clothes with distinction, even if she is close to the 200-pound mark. On the other hand, a woman of the same weight who plods about dumplily looks like a sack of meal in the same ensemble.

There's no short cut to posture, however. Anyone can take a deep breath and stand perfectly for a few minutes, but after years of sagging your muscles rebel at holding the pose.

MUSCLES DISCIPLINED

But the strenuous, regular exercises I have been doing have disciplined those muscles until now I find it not so difficult to sit and stand well. I have a number of "tricks" which I have read or heard, but never before practiced, that help.

I am confident that by the end of next week it will be no effort at all. Tomorrow I shall tell you how to help yourself to good carriage. I know you are already watching your diet and doing your "daily dozen."

Incidentally, I bought myself a pair of navy gaudine shorts for my home exercising. They are comfortable and take a lot of abuse without ripping. These slimming contraptions make more demands on them than tennis or badminton does.

Say, now that you mention it Mary, we don't stand or sit straight, either. Thanks for the tip. And judging from your new appearance, correct posture pays worthwhile dividends.

U. S. Pilot Pioneers Route for Bombers

the port gunner's seat ready to answer any challenge.

The code is changed daily in order to prevent the "Jerries" from using it to sneak in and out unnoticed on a raid.

The bomber flight was interesting only because it was the first made by a couple of Americans over the new and tougher route for ferrying American air aid to Britain.

British censors would not permit revelation of the starting point for the flight—Editor's Note.

Other aircraft which took off together with our plane were not sighted between the time the order was received to hop for "somewhere in England" until the time we landed. The planes flew far apart. Because the flight was made by night, the planes were totally blacked-out, and carried no riding lights—therefore there was a risk of collisions if they were too close.

The last we heard from our flight companions on the western side of the Atlantic was their farewell as we all walked to our planes.

There was the stock good-bye: "See you there," then the stock reply: "Betcha my life."

These great boats, with a range that tops the best anywhere else in the world, are active symbols of America's aid to Britain.

There were several others standing by still wearing the war-paint of the United States Navy at the take-off base.

The real story of the trip is the story of Homer Berry, who brought the bomber across the ocean with only a 20-minute "spell" away from the controls.

Fighter planes ordinarily are his "babies" but Berry handled the giant just as a nurse might juggle a fat baby.

4000-MILE RANGE

These big PB's, renamed "Catalinas" by Consolidated Aircraft, can carry 4000 pounds of bombs or two 2000-pound torpedoes. Their range is 4000 miles. The RA-5 will use them for convoy patrols. And convoys are the real "lifeline of Britain" today.

Berry's chief criticism of American planes was that they are underrated. He told us about "his babies" that are now being turned out in Buffalo.

They will carry one air cannon in the nose, and four light machine guns and two heavy ones in their wings. That's enough firepower to match the hardest sluggers over here.

Berry convinced us that the Air Corps may yet wipe the mud off the name of the nation that invented the airplane and then treated it like an illegitimate child.

Berry made a friend for life out of us the minute we met him—the flight commander wasn't too happy when we showed up for the flight.

"I don't mind telling you, old man, you aren't too welcome. After all, you know, you do eat up our parachutes and we've got to rig you up with an oxygen mask. But you're fortunate your pilot will be an American, Homer Berry. Do you know him?"

Then he introduced us. Berry didn't say a word. He just looked us over. Then he said:

"Okay, I want a stick of gum."

We have a sentimental attachment for Berry because he is the man who gave the late Arthur Brisbane all his "dope" on al-power. And Brisbane worked in America as Beverbrook worked in England to make America wake up to the fact that no nation is secure any more unless it controls the air above it.

Berry is as American as Main Street. The British on the bombers liked and kidded him—"we never heard of Berry until we saw a picture of him endorsing one of your American cigs." Thus they kidded him; but they respected him.

Americans have heard more about Berry. So will "the Jerries."

At a conference among pilots and observers before the takeoff, weather conditions were plotted on charts in a dim-lit warm room. Berry sparred with the others. Here was a veteran with whom caution was simple common sense.

One report of "icing conditions" at a certain point ahead was plotted on the course. Berry rubbed the back of his neck, shook his head and said:

"Uh huh, I think I'll stay home."

An Irishman in the group laughed.

"Oh come on, Chief. Hang onto my tail. I'll pull you through."

A Canadian was very precise:

"Let's proceed on the basis of the most pessimistic reports and discount the opinion of the Irishman. He has a wife and children back there and only wants to get home."

That's how it sounded, light and careless. But when the aircraft stretched their motors in warm-up runs before the take-off we couldn't forget what the young co-pilot said when the flight commander wished him luck.

You get an amazing conception of space up over the clouds—especially when you look down through a hole and see the ocean reduced to crepe de chine.

And just before dawn it looks like the whole earth was wrapped in ermine and because we were so far above the cloud mass it seemed as if we were creeping across it.

Then suddenly the sun shot through the warmed air like a six-alarm fire on the horizon.

We kept wondering what England would look like.

It was about what we expected when we did get there.

It didn't look like a country at war, until we saw barrage balloons spouting like great sad-faced silver owls around a dozen strategic spots.

Then we knew we were "somewhere in England."

Eat Health Vitamins

By MARTHA LEE

HEADLINES today are full of national defense measures, not the least of which is health defense. Whether you're in the military or civilian life, physical well-being is equally important. Adoption of a national health defense program by the government renews recognition of vitamins and minerals as vital ammunition in the battle for self-preservation.

Food fads or minimum diets which lead to malnutrition are infinitely out. Best precaution and nutrition is a varied and balanced food selection, with accent on the protective foods—those containing vitamins A, B, C and the mineral, calcium. Of all the "odd food essentials" needed by the body, these four are termed "protective" because they are the ones most often omitted in the average diet.

In this country which has everything, it is easy and pleasant to eat for health. Natural foods, which collectively contain all vital elements, are abundant. Even when winter comes there are still plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables in the United States.

Often the available fresh foods are neglected at this season when they are most needed for their protective qualities. Valued vitamins may be lost in cooking; that is why it is so important to eat some raw vegetables and fruits, and to drink plenty of fresh fruit juice. Citrus fruits, recognized as the primary source of vitamin C, become shock troops for health defense as cold weather cuts down the variety of fresh foods.

Here are some excellent new suggestions for adding more health as well as flavor to the family menu:

ORANGE WALDORF SALAD

3 cups unpeeled, red skinned apples, sliced
2 tbsp. lemon juice
Sugar
2 cups orange sections
¼ cup diced celery
1-3 cup chopped walnut meats
¼ cup lemon mayonnaise
Sprinkle apple with lemon juice and a little sugar. Combine with other ingredients. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

CHIFFON PUDDING

1 tbsp. gelatin
¾ cup orange juice
8 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 cup orange juice
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. grated orange peel
¾ tsp. salt

Soften gelatin in ¼ cup orange juice. Beat egg yolks until light, adding half the sugar. Add the orange and lemon juices and cook over boiling water until mixture coats spoon, as with boiled custard. Add softened gelatin. Cool. Stir in orange peel. When mixture begins to stiffen fold in stiffly beaten egg whites to which salt and remaining sugar have been added. Turn into individual molds and chill until firm. Makes 6 servings.

SWEET POTATO AND ORANGE CASSEROLE

5 medium-sized, or 2 lbs. sweet potatoes
¼ tsp. salt
2 oranges
2-3 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
¾ cup strained honey
¾ cup orange juice
4 tbsp. fine bread crumbs, to sprinkle on top if desired.
4 tbsp. butter

Wash the sweet potatoes; boil until almost tender, about 25 minutes. Then peel and cut the potatoes into 1-3-inch slices; season with salt. Slice the whole oranges, peel and all, thinly. Place alternate layers of potatoes and orange slices in a buttered casserole. Pour over them the combined other ingredients. Bake for an hour at 350 deg. F.

Good Manners

'Thank You' Note Always

DEAR MRS. BECKMAN:

1—If one is invited by a boy friend's mother for lunch or dinner it is proper for the girl to offer to help with the dishes?

2—Should the girl write a brief and better note to the hostess the day after the dinner?

READER:

1—In almost all circumstances it is generous and thoughtful of us to offer service, and it is probably best appropriate in this case. At any rate, you must try, and then be completely guided by what your hostess says. Don't even faintly insist if you sense that she plans this sort of thing in her own way, to be done after the guests depart.

2—There's never a time, after any kind of party, when a gracious note of thanks to the hostess isn't the thing for us to do. There isn't live the hostess who isn't made happy and delighted by our appreciation of her hospitality. It's a superb habit for us to adopt. A splendid resolution for the new year!

BLONDIE

COL. ROSS PILCHER PASHLEY (retired) lived at the Bromley House. To get in there you had to prove yourself worthy of this prestige, for although now a residential hotel charging comparatively low rates, Bromley House had once been the home of an exclusive club, since moved to larger quarters.

Albeit a trifle shabby, the place still had an air and its athletic wing made a big appeal to such a "men's man," as was the Colonel. White-haired, tall and distinguished, Col. Pashley was fiercely intent on keeping himself in good shape—his endurance on a handball court was his powerful boast.

He passed as a bachelor by common consent, although a faint legend would rear its head from time to time to the effect that he'd been married long ago. The rumor, however, had never been substantiated because it never occurred to anybody to question the Colonel about his personal affairs. Although he was extremely affable towards the other guests at Bromley House, the Colonel apparently had no intimates.

WARM FRIENDS

At intervals he would—with a big flourish—seat a certain lady at his table in the dining room. And if etiquette so demanded, he'd cordially introduce Miss Amanda Driscoll, director of a Little Settlement house on the lower East Side.

You? Immediately recognizable. Amanda—who obviously didn't hold with diet fads—as a woman to be designated as a guard person. And if you looked closely at them seated across from each other, you'd notice Amanda's ready smile. The Colonel with an affectionate, tough twinkling eye.

The friendship between the two had gone on for years. Amanda and her mother, however, a flut in an old house in the fifties. Whenever the Colonel felt that deep urge for a home-cooked meal, which comes suddenly on every lonesome male, he'd haughtily take his cane and saunter unperturbed toward the Driscoll menage.

He could most frequently be found there after one of his periodical bends. They were never of long duration, for the "Pashley" died of apoplexy that night. The physician of his definitely prevented him from graduating into the alcoholic class. A few more drinks than he could take would send him sprawling to the steam room. "I'll get the poison out of me," he'd say. "I'll get this self-inflicted punishment behind me, emerge very limp indeed, but otherwise as good as new."

It was then that he felt a dire need for Amanda's unobtrusive, yet efficacious understanding. Amanda would never let on that a man of his age should have more sense than risk a heart condition by using such violence against his ance of the adoration laid at his feet by gay little Francine, who would take hold of his arm and gaze up at him to say, "Gosh, Colonel, I never did feel such muscles in all my life."

Bromley House didn't know what to make of the situation. Some considered their a charming relationship. Others thought the Colonel kind to keep Francine out of mischief. But some, alas, murmured that there was no fool like an old fool.

"I'm just her chaperone," the Colonel would explain sheepishly when twitted about Francine.

The Driscolls completely lost sight of the Colonel and Amanda grew sufficiently worried to pass by Bromley House one day, just as the Colonel was sitting in the lobby have happened, if the Colonel hadn't received a telegram the very next morning, which he read to himself with trembling hands, while the furrows between his eyes deepened. After the significance of the message came to him, he walked slowly towards the room clerk.

"My son will be here tomorrow. I'll need an extra room as near mine as possible." He cleared his throat before the words came out.

"Your son, Colonel?" the clerk was dumbfounded.

"Yes, my son, I said," the Colonel almost shouted his irritation.

After all, then, there had been truth in the faint rumor of the Colonel's early marriage. Nobody, however, seemed to have heard that it had ended in a bitter divorce, his wife returning with their small baby to her parents in Canada. He'd never heard from her since then.

To all intents and purposes, therefore, the Colonel and Ross Junior were strangers. Young Ross, it seemed, was on his way to take over a good job he'd gotten for himself in New York and without as much as a by your leave from his mother, he'd decided to look up his long lost father.

Francine would giggle, as she looked at them. "You're so absurdly alike you two," she'd say.

At first they were a merry trio, Francine, Ross Junior and the Colonel. Gradually, however, the Colonel was left to himself. Once again he was making polite conversation about the military aspects of the war with the other inhabitants of Bromley House, who were inclined to view his return to the fold with restraint.

A SAD AWAKENING

But it was only after the Colonel had overheard Francine gasp with admiration, as she said to Ross Junior feeling his arm, "Darling, I do believe your muscles are bigger than Pop's," that the Colonel slowly made his way to the small bar, directly tucked away in a corner of the lobby.

The Colonel's ponder this time assumed such importance that young Ross tucked him into bed. "See hear, Dad," he said sternly, "you're too old for such shenanigans. You need somebody to look after you." His tone was patronizing.

As the Colonel lay, with his eyes closed, his thoughts drifted toward Amanda. Suddenly he realized how he'd missed her. Dear Amanda, who gave a man such a feeling of physical well-being and importance. He'd go over to the Driscolls as soon as he felt better. No, by Jove, he'd telephone Amanda—he'd invite her to dinner at a table for two that very night. He'd show those two young squirts.

Slowly and painfully he got into his clothes in time to receive his guest.

It was good to be sitting opposite Amanda once again. It was a long time since he'd felt so relaxed and at his ease. Only with the demi tasse did an idea slowly make its way within his mind.

"Amanda," he said without any preliminaries, timidly putting his hand over hers, "don't you think it would be a good idea if you and I were to get married?" Involuntarily his head turned toward young Ross and Francine, seated at a table across the room.

Amanda looked at them, too. She gave him a squeeze. "Yes, dear, I think it would be a very good idea," she said comfortingly.

And once again Amanda was gazing upon the Colonel with a twinkling yet affectionate eye.

health. A fact they both tacitly recognized.

There was always a welcome for him at the Driscolls. The old lady was an invalid and the Colonel's gallant demeanor toward her and her wheel chair she found extremely pleasing.

Only the Driscolls' maid would emit something akin to a snort before the Colonel's back. She felt her adored Miss Amanda was getting nothing out of all this. No girl in Harlem would put up with some man just dropping in to eat when he felt like it, without any serious intentions. No, siree!

No matter stood when a cute little redhead named Francine, daughter of entering art school, left her native habitat at Potteryville, to take up residence at Bromley House. She was by far its youngest guest and she was accepted there only because the manager, a close friend of her family's, had undertaken that Francine should tread the straight and narrow path, prescribed for "nice" girls in Potteryville.

Francine immediately took possession of the Colonel. The difference in their ages, she led one to believe, made it permissible for her to pursue him quite brazenly, whenever she got a glimpse of him. It grew so that she'd telephone his room for him to come downstairs, whenever she wanted somebody to talk to or take a walk with her.

The Colonel, a trifle bewildered at first, if the truth were told, finally settled down to an accept-with Francine, as usual, at his side. With great effusiveness he made the two known to each other, insisting they partake of a cup of tea with him.

The party fell a trifle flat, although Francine talked her normal gay banter and the Colonel, in spite of the strain of embarrassment, tried to keep the conversation rolling. There was a distressed look instead of the usual twinkle in Amanda's clear blue eyes, as she gazed back and forth from the Colonel to Francine.

Anyway, who knows what would

Prof. Sprague Sees Lower U. S. Living Standard

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (INS)—Inflation or not, America's living standard is due for a sharp drop to finance the defense program, according to O. M. W. Sprague, formerly financial adviser to the Bank of England and the U. S. Treasury.

If taxation for defense doesn't do it, inflation eventually will, Sprague told the Harvard Business School Club.

BILL CORUM SAYS Layden Reverses Field In Accepting Pro Job

NEW YORK, Feb. 5—The selection of Elmer Layden as commissioner of professional football is at once excellent and surprising. They couldn't have found a better man for the job. But Layden never has been much of a booster for the pro game. Rather to the contrary.

You will find his personal attitude, or rather what previously was his personal attitude, and that of the university itself reflected in the fact that there are few former Notre Dame players on the rosters of the pros.

Apparently the club owners did not find in that serious objection to Elmer's appointment to a post that has been crying to be filled since Joe Carr's death, and I repeat that they couldn't have made a happier choice.

Elmer brings to his new job an excellent mind, a pleasant personality, a fine and first hand knowledge of football, and an unquestioned integrity of leadership that the pro game definitely requires at this time.

Add to these things his coming from Notre Dame with its outstanding football tradition and you will realize how happy is the choice. With men like Layden, Dr. Jock Sutherland and Jimmy Conzelmann, the boy orator of the "Big Muddy," the pros are cutting heavily into the ranks of the college coaches.

When there is another going major league, as one day there will be, this will be even more true. And those who have poured out thousands of words—at so much per word, of course—to emphasize the de-emphasis of the college game will have got their way in a way they least expected.

I was reading recently where President Hutchins of Chicago University, the father of drop-the-handkerchief football, was here in the East to raise money for the university. Which caused me to wonder idly if the good Doctor found it as easy to get the necessary, now that the Staggs and Shaughnessys are gone from the Midway and the Autumnal cheering and lusty singing of "with the Grand Old Man to lead them, etc.," no longer rolls across the campus on the night before the Big Game.

There always was something nice about that, I thought. Something to point up those carefree college days. Something to remember them by. But I suppose that even in a brain fondler, there must be efficiency experts who have no time for such trivialities.

No Front Man, But One Who'll Get to the Front:

ELMER LAYDEN will not bring to his new job any outstanding ability as a front man or show man. For a thin man, however, he is very solid. He has character and so far as it is possible he will see that anything he has to do with also has that all-important quality.

He was ideally situated under the golden dome of his Alma Mater. To me he seemed to belong there, and he did. I feel sure Father O'Donnell must deeply regret his leaving.

There had, however, been a rumor for some time that he might give up active coaching for the less trying job of athletic director alone. He held both titles at Notre Dame. But the coaching of the football team was, of course, his major task.

A tense and worrying type of fellow underneath, the strain of those tough games Saturday after Saturday told on him heavily, and can't

'IRISH' MAY LAND LEAHY DESPITE B. C. CONTRACT

By WILL CONNELL

Frank Leahy, titled "The Second Rockne" when he finessed his Boston College eleven to the national football throne this year, may soon change the tag to "The Second Rockne of Notre Dame."

Boston College will not let its new five-year contract with Leahy stand in the way if Frank is offered the South Bend berth.

Leahy himself has not closed his ears to a possible summons from his alma mater.

MEET FRIDAY

The graduate board of athletics will gather at Notre Dame on Friday to consider naming a successor to Elmer Layden, head coach and director of athletics who resigned Monday to become the new high commissioner of the National Pro Football League at $20,000 per year.

And if that group decides to invite Leahy to guide the Irish, B. C. may be minus a coach in a few days.

A graded form on the field now rounding the first turn in the race for the South Bend award might read as follows.

Best recent form.

Frank Leahy, B. C., 5-1. Jimmy Phelan, Washington, 6-1. Strictly the danger.

Jimmy Crowley, Fordham, 8-1. May go well.

Frank Thomas, Alabama, 20-1. Can surprise.

Adam Walsh, Bowdoin, 20-1. Some chance.

Maurice Smith, Cullanova, 20-1. Would surprise.

Jack Meagher, Auburn, 30-1. Tough spot.

Dr. Eddie Anderson, Iowa, 40-1. Doesn't want it.

Harry Stuhldreher, Wisconsin, 40-1. Slim chance.

Buck Shaw, Santa Clara, 40-1. Coarsely here.

Charley Bachman, Mich. State, 50-1. Would surprise.

Field—Includes Joe Boland, N. D. line coach; Maj. Edward, Purdue; Harry Mehr, Mississippi.

A New York report yesterday quoted Leahy as saying that he would feel honored and thrilled even to be considered for the Notre Dame position, and that he would hate to leave Boston College, where he has been very happy.

These same reports had it that Leahy admitted he has been informed that he would be the first selection for the job and that he had talked with the Notre Dame envoy while in New Orleans for the Sugar Bowl test.

LEAHY OUT OF TOWN

Leahy was out of town today on a football banquet, but it is unlikely he would comment directly even if he could be reached.

Boston College officials were silent on the matter except insofar as admitting that they would not hold Leahy to his five-year contract if he wishes to cancel it.

Dr. Eddie Anderson would be a likely choice except that he is in a much better position at Iowa to combine his physician's career with coaching than he would be at Notre Dame.

Jimmy Phelan and Jimmy Crowley are the two strongest contenders after Leahy, and either might well wind up at South Bend.

Ex-Boxer Beaten Up By Chinatown Thugs

Powell, Sayles, Rookie Hurlers, Sign With Sox

Larry Powell and Bill Sayles, rookie pitchers, today returned signed contracts to the Boston Red Sox, according to an announcement from Eddie Doherty, press relations director of the Fenway flock.

Powell, a southpaw, won 12 and lost seven for San Francisco of the coast league last year and had an earned run average of 3.57. He participated in only 23 games last year.

Powell reported he had overcome the effects of a pulled muscle in his back which bothered him during August. He came back to win two games in September.

Sayles, a righthander, won 3 and lost 1 for Little Rock. He pitched in only six games last year, hurting his arm in early summer. He hasn't thrown a ball since.

His spring training trip to Sarasota with the Sox is something in the nature of an experiment to find out the extent of his arm improvement.

Bauer, Hicks Win In Florida Golf

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 5 (AP)—Medalist Elizabeth Hicks of Pasadena, Cal., and most of the other favorites easily won their first-round matches in the Palm Beach Women's Golf Tournament.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 5 (INS)—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman today reappointed Gen. John J. Phelan chairman of the New York state boxing commission.

Old Ring Feud Renewed Here

Unless the jinx drops in again, the feud between George Salamone and Salvatore Bartolo, both of East Boston, will move from the talking stage into fiery action in the Garden Thursday night, Feb. 13.

Twice foiled in his efforts to bring this neighborhood grudge fight onto the Garden pulpit, Matchmaker Rip Valenti of the Goodwin A. C. refuses to quit. This is because he looks upon a Salamone-Bartolo fight as a natural from all angles and one that should positively be staged.

Last fall he signed them for a fight. Bartolo was hurt in the gym. Last month he hooked them up again. Salamone was hurt in the gym. These were genuine injuries. Salamone bruised his punching hand; Bartolo swelled an ear making it a target of balloon proportions. Valenti excused each of them on the occasions, refusing to let a fight go on in which the contestants weren't in grade-A condition.

Mack Likes A's Chances

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5 (AP)—Connie Mack has a "feeling" his 1911 Athletics will surprise in the American Baseball League race.

On the eve of his departure to-morrow night for his team's training camp at Anaheim, Cal., the 78-year-old leader of the A's declared:

"I have a sort of a feeling—I can't get away from it—that my boys are going to fool a lot of people."

"I'm not making any predictions (last year Connie predicted correctly the Yankees would finish third). I think the top five teams of last year will be pretty well bunched. I look for the other three teams—and I guess you know the name of one of them—to spring a lot of surprises."

The Athletics haven't won a pennant in 10 years and not since 1937, when they were in first place for the month of May, have they enjoyed a first division ranking. Last year they finished in the cellar.

The pitching, as usual, bothers Connie. "It's taking longer than I thought to develop good pitchers," he mused. "But perhaps this will be the year."

Otherwise, Connie thinks he is well set with Bob Johnson, Wally Moses, Sam Chapman in the outfield; Frankie Hayes behind the bat, and Dick Siebert, Benny McCoy, Al Francato and Pete Suder in the infield.

Approve Helmets For Use in N. L.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (AP)—The National League adopted a helmet for batters which all the clubs will try out in spring training. It was revealed today. It was invented by Dr. George Bennett of Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore and League President Ford Frick said it was guaranteed to prevent fractures.

Larry MacPhail, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, said he would make wearing one compulsory for his players, but other club executives said their players would be given the option of wearing one or not.

Bruins Pass 16 Mark After Donnybrook

By BILL GRIMES

In a knock-down-and-drag-out 70-minute battle, the Bruins stopped Les Canadiens 5 to 3 at the Boston Garden and passed the 16-game mark with ten victories and six ties to their credit.

From start to finish the game was a Donnybrook. But, strange as it may seem, there were more spectators injured than combatants. In the first period, Murphy Chamberlain, who is the sparkplug of Les Canadiens, cross-checked Milt Schmidt and the Bruin's skate ripped Elmer Lach, a Canadian, who was sitting on the bench for seven stitches.

In the third period, Terry Reardon's stick got out of control on the boards and a spectator was nicked for three stitches. And between those accidents, Chamberlain was opened up for a couple of stitches by Woody Dumart.

CANADIENS FORCE PLAY

The Flying Frenchmen made the hockey game, which was one of the most interesting and thrilling of the season. They went after the Bruins from the start and they overcame a two goal deficit to tie up the count in the third period. With the count 3-3, the teams went into the overtime period. The Bruins took the offense and the Cowley line dashed into Canadiens territory. Bill Cowley started the play and twelve seconds after the face off the Bruins were out in front.

PLENTY OF LUCKY GOALS

Cowley gave the puck to Roy Conacher who raced down the left wing boards almost into the corner from where he centered the puck from Eddie Wiseman who was on the right wing and travelling at high speed cut in sharp and his timing was so perfect that he arrived in front of the net, and very close to the crease, just as the puck slid across the mouth of the cage. Eddie was going too fast to get off a shot, so he deflected the disc into the net for a goal.

Less than a minute later, Cap Clapper came up with one of the best individual rushes of the year. The Frenchmen were pressing Bruins trying to get back on even terms and had five men in the Boston zone. Suddenly Clapper broke out with the puck. He went down the left wing boards, with big Jack Portland in hot pursuit. It looked as though Portland was going to overtake the Bruin leader but Clapper swerved, faked a shot, which pulled Gardiner out of position and then pushed the puck into the net.

Bill Cowley and Desse Smith scored for the Bruins in the first period. Cowley put the Rossmen out in front by caging a Clapper rebound at 13:30 and five minutes later, Smith came up with a lucky goal after taking a pass back from Woody Dumart.

Charlie Sands produced the first French goal early in the second period.

GIFT FOR BENOIT

The third Bruin goal was scored by Milt Schmidt. Then, the Frenchmen were the recipients of a lucky break, which gave them their second goal. During a scrimmage in front of the 30-ton cage, "Flash" Hollett attempted to clear the puck into the corner. The disc started for the corner but before he had traveled five feet it hit Eddie Wiseman's skate and wound up in the Bruins' goal.

Joe Benoit, who was the last Frenchman to touch the puck, was credited with the goal.

Johnny Quilty came up with the tying goal at 11:17 in the third period.

A recommendation to alter Massachusetts legislation that now allows dog track operators to take 15 per cent of money bet at their plants was included in a supplementary report of the State Gaming Commission filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives today.

Elmer C. Nelson, member of the commission, said in the report.

"The reason dog track operators are allowed to take 15 per cent while horse track men take only 10 per cent is that when the legislation was passed it was doubtful whether the public would accept dog racing, and the larger percentage would be needed to attract investors."

"With the exception of a new track built last year, all dog tracks have long since paid off their initial costs."

"It seems to me either the State should receive the difference between 10 and 15 per cent or the dog track cut should be lowered to 10 per cent so both dog and horse tracks would retain the same amount."

"I expect have testified that the dog track cut would reduce the income to Massachusetts $10,000 a year; and there are several bills pending in the Legislature designed to increase the cut."

"For the protection and improvement of racing," Nelson continued, "and to prevent a recurrence of the unfavorable publicity of last year, I think another change should be made."

"Under existing laws it is impossible for the commission or the Legislature to obtain a complete picture of the actual ownership, profits or operation of a racing enterprise unless the officials of the enterprise see fit to give it."

"It would seem advisable to pass enabling legislation so that facts and figures will be available to the commission at all times."

"In my opinion, the adoption of a law similar to sections 11 and 12 of the Maryland racing laws would be for the best interests of those who enjoy this sport and for the sake of the state as well."

N. L. Owners Protest Landis' Draft Ruling

NEW YORK, Feb. 5 (AP)—Branch Rickey of the St. Louis Cardinals, who probably knows better than anybody else the animosity of Commissioner Kene-saw M. Landis to chain store baseball, says the latest effort to restrict farm operations will have exactly the reverse effect.

Other National League magnates haven't made up their minds as definitely as the Redbirds' business manager, but they joined in a unanimous stand yesterday against a new rule that minor league players purchased while subject to the baseball draft can not be returned to the minors for a year unless waived out of both big leagues.

WILL HURT MINORS

Ford Frick, league president, said:

"There is a lot of merit in Landis' intention to see that every player brought into the majors gets a fair trial before he is returned to minors, and in theory this rule is good. But we felt that in its practical application it involves hardships on both clubs and players which the commissioner may not have fully considered. It reaction would be felt especially in the minors."

A committee of Rickey, Warren Giles of the Cincinnati Reds and Leo Bonny of the New York Giants was appointed to draft a resolution pointing out to Landis what the National League considered objectionable in the rule.

"There are many grounds on which to object to the ruling," said Rickey. "But insofar as it is aimed at the farm systems, it will do more harm to the clubs operating independently than to clubs like the Cardinals which have extensive minor league connections."

DESTROY'S PLAYER VALUES
"It will be possible for a club operating several farms to keep a considerable reservoir of talent at all times and to bring to its major league roster only players considered ready immediately for big league competition."

"Clubs which depend on purchasing players will find it more difficult to lay hands immediately on men who will help them. Thus the rule makes the farm operation not only advantageous but necessary."

He said he too believed Landis "had failed to consider the full impact" to the rule and hoped the commissioner could be prevailed upon to modify it.

"It will destroy player values and the player market which have made possible the very existence of independent minor league clubs," he continued, "and will retard the advancement of players because minor league clubs will be unwilling to sell their best players, if they can get no more than the draft price."

HOLDOUT CAMP FOR INDIANS

CLEVELAND, Feb. 5 (AP)—Vice President C. C. Slapnicka today marked Hot Springs, Ark., as the Cleveland Indians' holdout center.

Rollie Hemslay, Al Milnar and Roy Weatherly, important cogs in the 1940 second-place machine, are loitering around the resort health baths and visiting with Willis Hudlin, former pitcher who owns a string of tourist cabins.

For recreation the boys are mailing unsigned contracts back to the Indians.

The vice-president admitted that eight Indians were still dickering over their 1941 contracts, but insisted that the Hot Springs group constituted the only potential holdout bloc.

"I haven't had much luck getting together with Hemslay, Weatherly and Milnar," he declared, "but they can't yet be officially classed as holdouts. They'll be around when the training camp (Fort Myers, Fla.), opens Feb. 17."

Pitchers Mel Harder and Ken Jungles, first baseman Hal Trosky and outfielders Beau Bell and Jeff Heath are the others outside the fold.

"You can say Bell is as good as signed," Slapnicka added. "Harder will be back to see me today or tomorrow and we shouldn't have too much trouble."

"Heath has been unusually silent after sending back his unsigned contract, but that is customary. Hemslay is making unreasonable demands. He'll accept our terms when he gets over the idea that the trading of Frankie Fyfiak made him an indispensable man."

Trosky is one of the team's highest paid players, but Slapnicka said he expected no trouble in signing the big first baseman.

Contestants can enter ONE EVENT only.

ENTRIES CLOSE FRIDAY, FEB. 7

The Silver Skates Derby editor has officially accepted Bebe's entry and has put her into the midget class where there are several other lots from six years up. Whether or not Bebe actually competes rests on the decision of her daddy, E. G. Fraser, whose interesting letter follows:

"I hate to trouble you each year, but Bebe cuts out her own entry each year before we have had a chance to read the paper. I know she is too young, still she gets a thrill when she mails her entry along with her brother Leo's, aged 13, who will most certainly take part. Bebe took part in a roller skating derby some time ago and since can't understand why she isn't old enough to win the trophy in the Silver Skates Derby."

NO POST ENTRIES

There are several matters to be cleaned up in these last two days before entries close.

First and foremost—NO POST ENTRIES WILL BE ACCEPTED. All entries must be in the mails before this Friday's midnight hour. The heats will be drawn up on Saturday, the lists given to the printer over the weekend, and late entries must necessarily be rejected.

So please—heed this last warning. File immediately.

Many continue to ask whether speed skates must be used in the Derby races. The answer is "NO." Figure skates, hockey skates or any other kind of ice skates will be permitted. It's all up to the competitor.

Next comes the question of the girls' midget class, a division added for the first time this year. Girls 12 years and under may enter this class. It differs from the boys' midgets where participants must be under 12 years. The reason is that there is no other girls' class all the way up to the intermediates while the boys have juvenile and junior classes.

RACE PROGRAM

Next comes the length of the races. Following is the chart of distances for the final, semi-finals (if needed), and finals.

	Trials	Semi-Finals	Final
Boys' Senior	1 1/2 mile	1 mile	1 mile
Boys' Intermediate	3/4 mile	1/2 mile	1/2 mile
Boys' Junior	1/2 mile	1/4 mile	1/4 mile
Boys' Juvenile	1/2 mile	1/4 mile	1/4 mile
Girls' Senior	1/2 mile	1/2 mile	1/2 mile
Girls' Intermediate	3/4 mile	1/2 mile	1/2 mile
Girls' Midget	1/2 mile	1/4 mile	1/4 mile

Many have written in, fearful that the editor had not received their entries, because their names had not been published. It has been impossible to print all entries. We have taken them at random. However, all entrants will shortly receive official cards and instructions on when and where to report. If you mailed your entry, we received it. Please don't worry.

Among other entries received are those of Ellen Horgan, 12, Worcester; Claire Burke, 12, Worcester; William Ramsden, 31, Derry, N. H.; Charles Grace, 14, Framingham; Evelyn O'Hara, 20, Somerville; Vincent Bonneau, 15, Worcester; Milton Greenglass, 13, Roxbury; Edward McMenimon, 14, Roxbury; P. W. Anderson, 17, Cambridge; Robert Cunningham, 10, Jamaica Plain; Henry Thormahlen, Jr., 21, Worcester.

Skied Mt. Cannon 17 Times in One Day

By TAP GOODENOUGH

SKIERS! IMAGINE MAKING SEVENTEEN RUNS DOWN THE CANNON MOUNTAIN TRAILS ALL IN ONE DAY! This represents about 36 miles of downhill diving on the hickorys. It has been done!

Appropriately enough, this unique record is held by the cashier at the Tramway in Franconia Notch, N. H., Reggy Keniston, expert skier from Littleton. The feat has been equaled by only one other skier, Ted Hunter, former Dartmouth racer.

Talking with the 24-year-old, slim and genial cashier at the Tram last Sunday, we discovered that this lad's skiing background is most colorful. Had he desired, Reg could have been a professional instructor or racer of note today. However, he has settled down to his present position, and is living happily with his wife, Glenna, another skier, whom he married a year ago.

Selling tickets for three years for the aerial Tram hasn't been wasted on Keniston, who knows over 2000 skiers by their first names. He also estimated that he has sold nearly one-half million tickets in this time. . . . His acquaintances have come from every state in this country, including Hawaii and Alaska.

Reg started to take lessons in skiing about 12 years ago, having graduated from home-made barrel races. He received expert technique from Sig Buchmayr, who had just arrived in America to direct the first organized ski school here at Peckett's on Sugar Hill.

The lad became so proficient on the boards that he was soon winning all the downhill and slalom races in the high school meets, competing for Littleton high. He captured 35 or 40 cups and trophies, and was named All-New England interscholastic skiing star, undefeated in scholastic circles.

Hundred-yard dashes on skis are rather uncommon today, but a few years ago, Reg won several such races, actually running 100 yards on skis in 10.9 seconds.

A humorous highlight in his career was recalled by this skier concerning a fast run he made down the Cannon Mountain Trail with Steve Turner, professional teacher. Both boys were racing closely together when they came upon a large bump in the trail. Steve christened around the mound, but Reg gave a terrific jump into the air, and the astonished Steve glanced up to see Reg sailing serenely over his head. Reggy almost landed in the trees after this unexpected flight!

He tried ski jumping just once from an old 40 meter take-off, and ripped a new pair of trousers upon landing. "Downhill skiing for me after this!" exclaimed Reg.

To promote the sport and boost Littleton for the Chamber of Commerce, Reg formerly gave free ski lessons to Snow Trainers. He also had his own school on Mt. Eustis and at Newport, Vt.

On Tuesday, his day off, he either skis or takes color photos, and he has made many grand shots of the region.

King Hannah has nick-named Reg, "King Kandahar." Sel, a racer of famed repute, likes to be paced by Keniston, who, among other things, is now an instructor in Red Cross First Aid. . . .

New Ski Worlds to conquer, 145 miles from Boston, were made accessible last Sunday by the Boston and Albany's initial Snow Train of the season which carried 251 skiers to Farnams-in-the-Berkshires of the Bay State. . . . Harold Kolb, our skiing scout, reports that this development is the biggest project yet undertaken among the ski centers in the rolling Berkshire area. Mirrored in Cheshire Lake, challenging the near-by Mount Greylock to the north and flanked by the rounded dome of Mount Everett at the south, one finds Farnams, thus dropped by nature. . . .

This is a veritable haven from a canon in that it is ideal terrain for the novice and intermediate skier. Here the recreational runner may practice in peace, safe from experts and racers. Practice slopes abound in this spot with its half-mile hill having an average grade of 15 degrees, smooth as a freshly-graded polo field, free from stones. Three towes are available to all, two of 1300 feet in length, the other being 1000 feet. An inviting lodge may be reached from the towes, where food and warmth are found.

A carefully checked total gave the figures of 10,850 at seven of the more popular centers and an estimated attendance of 5000 at the other 24 areas, making a grand total of 15,850, a lot of hickory! . . .

At Greenfield, Mass., the most thrilling toboggan slide in the country is now open. . . . Starting well up on Rocky Mountain, the toboggan, tipped from a takeoff table, is guided down an icy chute for a distance of 1800 feet to the banked, half circle turn around which the riders swirl in complete safety and continue on back toward the mountain. . . .

Throughout the Berkshires the ski business boomed last week, and all records for the number of skiers were broken.

WRESTLING BADMEN IN ARENA GO

Ben Morgan, 320-pound bearded Texan tackles Marvin Westenberg tonight at the Arena in the main event of Paul Bowser's wrestling show.

Both are known as mat badmen, and maybe their war will be something like the nursery tale duel of the gingham dog and calico cat who tore each other to shreds.

Al McCoy, former New England heavyweight boxing champion, will referee.

Both Morgan and Westenberg are after a shot at The Angel and this will probably be the final test for the winner before he gets a crack at the man with the large head.

In a special event, Pantaleon Manlapi, champion of the Philippine Islands and fast becoming a big favorite with Hub fans, takes on Andy Meixner of New York, while the semi-final will have The Green Dragon, mysterious star who has been winning regularly, against Matty Jones of Tennessee.

Preliminaries include Tommy O'Toole against Cowboy Govro and George Linehan against Everett Kibbons.

AL KAWAL
Goes to New Field

Kawal Resigns From B. U. for Michigan Post

Al Kawal, brilliant line coach and freshman hoop mentor at Boston University, has resigned to become line coach at Michigan State it was learned today.

With a six year record of success behind him, the Terrier athletic officials accepted his resignation with regrets.

Kawal not only fashioned great lines in football but his record in basketball has shattered all figures in Terrier history.

The freshmen basketball squads under Kawal have won 54 and lost 13 at the present writing. Two of his teams went through their seasons with only one loss and his current group has raced through seven straight games without a defeat.

DEVELOPED GREAT LINEDMEN

It has been in football, though, where he has achieved most recognition. Arriving at Boston University directly from his playing days at Northwestern, Al stepped right into the varsity job and has developed the greatest linedmen the Terriers have ever had.

One of his prize pupils was Charlie "Chuck" Greenman, a 185-pound guard who Boston College players said was tougher for them to handle than Tennessee's
Bob Sufferidge.

Al will leave Boston at the conclusion of the basketball season and arrive at East Lansing in time to start spring practice on April 1.

BOOST FOR HANLEY

He is oddly enough a pupil of Pat Hanley's. Al learned his line play under Pat at Northwestern and the Terrier mentor was so impressed with him that when Pat had an opening for a line coach he immediately secured Kawal, even though Al was then lacking in experience.

At Northwestern, Al captained the football and basketball teams.
He was a standout in both sports and made All Conference teams in both endeavors.

Now under Pat he has become as great a line coach as he was player.

This appointment is a great boost for both Kawal and Hanley.
For Charlie Beckman, a Notre Dame man, to select Kawal is well deserved recognition for the Terrier grid boss and his line coach.

Juggling Gives B. A. A. Better Field in Mile

A bit of canny track feature reshuffling was done today by Chairman Des Wadsworth for the Boston A. A. 1000 and mile classics and as a result these features line up as better than ever in the 52-year history of the games.

When Wadsworth received the entry of Les MacMittell of New York U. for the Hunt Mile he found the field was too large for some a fast stepping toll of milers. Some pruning was necessary and the Unicorn chairman immediately went to work re-arranging the fields in the Hunter Mile and Lap-1000.

Wadsworth contacted Gene Venke, slated to run the mile, and the New York A. C. stylist readily agreed to go to the mark in the shorter distance. Wadsworth also transferred Ed Culp of Xavier University, New Orleans, Ralph
Metcalfe's mile protégé, to the 1000 yards.

Thus the Lapham 1000 Saturday night will have one of the most closely matched fields in the history of the race. The list, not yet complete, includes Jim Kehoe, former Maryland middle distance ace,
Lyn Radcliffe, Syracuse; Joseph
Zettler, Columbus Council K. of C.,
Brooklyn, N. Y.; Venke and Culp.

The Hunter mile field received a big boost today when MacMittell forwarded his entry. The intercollegiate champion has been a real threat to the supremacy of Mel, Munski, Fenske and company, and many track followers are looking for the Violet ace to lead the pack
Saturday night.

yourself to try remarkable Serutan, which is recommended especially for people 35, 40 and older. Serutan helps loosen up for the Violet ace to lead the pack Saturday night.

War Ace

Twice cited and twice decorated, Flight Lieut. George (Pat) Christie, Canada's leading war ace, is the hero of today's thrilling installment of Austen Lake's "The Wounded RAF Heroes Speak." Christie, the son of a McGill University professor, tells how he crashed an Italian bomber into the Mediterranean without firing a single shot.
